Union Leaders and Organizers in Front of Strike Headquarters

Bancroft Assures the Public That Peace Is Near

General William A. Bancroft of the Boston Elevated Railroad issued the following statement today:

"We are running normal service this morning, and we expect to do so as long as the officials of the community, which we serve, can protect our men and property.

"A large number of men who did not report for work yesterday have applied to their respective superintendents today and asked for reinstatement. We have at present more men to operate cars than we had seventy-two hours ago."

The New Haven Railroad announced this afternoon that beginning at 7 a. m. and continuing until 6 o'clock Sunday morning, special trains will leave the South Station every hour for Forest Hills, Blue Hill Avenue (Mattapan) and Atlantic. This is to avoid a repetition of the inconvenience caused to patrons of the L road by the strike. This will reach the Roxbury, Dorchester and Mattapan residential districts.

No Cambridge surface cars will be run this evening after 8 o'clock. This information was sent by the company to Captain Murray of the Cambridge police. An effort will be made to have the subway cars take care of all the traffic

The cars of the Boston Elevated Company, in the streets and in the subways, were run today on all of the divisions, and General Bancroft, president of the company, declared that the service was normal.

The severity with which the courts have handled disturbers had the effect of calming the situation today. Some cars were stoned and some windows broken, but demonstrations in various parts of the greater city consisted mostly of yelling and hooting.

Six men were jailed for offences in connection with the strike, ranging from throwing lemon to stoning cars. Thirty others were fined. Judge Fallon in South Boston sentenced a boy to a month's imprisonment for crying "scab" and then placed him on probation.

PRESIDENT MAHON HERE FROM DETROIT.

A crowd of 500, carrying American flags, started a parade from union headquarters at No. 724 Washington street shortly after noon.

The South Station was literally swamped this afternoon by the crowd that swept in that direction to take trains to their homes, the stations in Cambridge and at the Dorchester Bay generation. At 4 o'clock hardly another person could press into the station. Dewey square, at the junction of Summer street, Federal street and Atlantic avenue, was black with humanity.

Two mounted policemen and four on foot attempted to get some sort of order out of the confusion, but had a hard time. As fast as new trains could be made up they were run out of the station, and the way has now been relieved. officials of the railroad stood in various directions at the station and directed them to the people through megaphones.

Nine special trains were run to the Stadium. Extra coaches were placed on all of the outgoing trains.

William D. Mahon of Detroit, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, arrived in Boston this afternoon, accompanied by John C. Colgan of Chicago. Mr. Colgan is a member of the International Executive Board. They went to strike headquarters and conferred with Organizer Fay and other union leaders.

President Mahon is more than six feet

STARS OUT FOR OLYMPIC MEET

By JACK CONWAY.

All roads lead to the Harvard Stadium today, where the cream of the American college, club and school athletes will compete in the Olympic tryouts. It is the greatest athletic meet ever held in this country, and over 20,000 people will witness the contests.

The men who make the best showings will be selected to represent the United States at the Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden, this Summer. Almost every athlete of note in the East and Middle West will be seen in action, and several world's records will likely go by the board.

The track is in excellent condition and it looks as though several old marks will be erased from the record books. With three and four, and in many cases even more, "headliners" entered in the different events, indications point toward many thrilling battles for supremacy in the field and track events.

Many sturdy New England athletes are entered in the meet. They have been training for months for the supreme test to which they will be put today. The "stars" from the big Eastern cities and the West are sure to give the local idols a tough battle for supremacy. New York alone is represented by over three score men and they were confident that they will win the bulk of the high honors.

The winners in today's big meet stand a good chance of repeating their victories at Stockholm. The American Olympic team swept the board at the London Olympics and should do even better this Summer in Sweden.

SEVERE FROST IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 8.—This locality was hard hit by an almost unprecedented severe frost for this season of the year, the thermometer registering as low as 26 degrees, six degrees below freezing. Market gardeners met with heavy loss, and in some instances the freeze was so hard as to injure potatoes. Corn, beans, tomatoes, cucumbers and other vegetables were ruined in gardens throughout the city and its suburbs.

DICKENS' "BLEAK HOUSE" IS SOLD

LONDON, June 8.—Bleak House, which was for years Charles Dickens' Summer home at Broadstairs, has been sold for $15,500.

WILEY WILL NOT COME TO BOSTON

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the noted pure food expert, will not come to Boston to the head of the Boston Board of Health. He notified Mayor Fitzgerald to that effect through Congressman Murray.

Dr. Wiley stated that he appreciated the great honor that had been tendered to him, but that he felt that he would not be able to accept the position.

Here is Dr. Wiley's letter to Congressman Murray:

Washington, June 8, 1912.

Hon. William Francis Murray, U. S. House Representative, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Murray—I wrote to Boston and got a copy of the annual report of the Board of Health for 1910, and also a book containing the statutes and decision thereon in the courts governing the State Board of Health and city and town boards of Health, and the Boston Board of Health. From these two publications I have been able to form at least some idea of the activities of the Board of Health of Boston.

I was pleased to see the extent of the work which it has done, and the thorough manner in which this work has been accomplished. I was more or less acquainted with the milk inspection work of the Boston Board of Health, having been in touch with Mr. Jordan, who has charge of it for several years, in connection with the committee on the analysis of the American Public Health Association.

Praises Health Board.

The other scientific work of the board, especially its bacteriological work, seems, also, to have been well done and in a manner helpful to the people of the city. I was particularly struck with the fact that the death rate, from tuberculosis has steadily declined, so that now it is hardly half what it was a quarter of a century ago.

I failed, however, to secure any detailed statements respecting the duties and activities of the two members who, with the chairman, compose the board of health.

I may say, in addition to this, that I have received numerous communications from prominent citizens of Boston, and newspaper clipping from all the leading daily papers of the city, warmly supporting the suggestion that I become President of the Board of Health. I have so far failed to receive a single communication of an adverse character. I must, therefore, conclude that the suggestion of my appointment has met with the approbation of the leading citizens and newspapers of Boston.

Another thing which has appealed powerfully to me in this matter is the fact of the opportunity of rendering public service in an effective way, and along a line in which I have had large experience. The reason, therefore, to which I have come, to decline the offer, has been reached only after careful consideration, and I may say with sincere regret.

Should Be Unrestricted.

The fact which have led me to my final conclusions are first, that I could not break engagements already made, which take practically all of my time. Your suggestion that possibly the authorities of Boston would permit me to complete outstanding engagements is of course a generous one, but I do feel that I could undertake the duties of health officer or Boston without giving my whol time thereto. These considerations have been the dominant ones in leading me to a negative conclusion.

FRENCH SUBMARINE SUNK IN COLLISION; 27 MEN DROWNED

CHERBOURG, France, June 8.—One of the worst disasters in the long series of accidents that has marked the use of the submarine in the French navy occurred near here today when the submarine Vendemaire was struck by the battleship Saint Louis and sunk in 180 feet of water. It is believed twenty-seven were lost.

According to the commander of the Saint Louis, a large gash was cut in the submarine and she sank immediately. As soon as he reported the nature of the accident, a dispatch was sent to the Ministry of Marine at Paris, stating that there was no possibility of saving any of those on board the vessel.

Within an hour after the accident had been flashed here by wireless, powerful machinery and dredges were hurried from the harbor and divers were sent out on the fastest torpedo boat in the harbor. The divers were able to descend only a short distance, and reported to Admiral Fournier that the only way of bringing up the vessel would be to drag for her with grappling hooks.

The rapidity with which the vessel sank indicated that the plates were unriveted, and submarine experts here declared that even if the crew succeeded in closing air watertight compartments, they would be unable to survive for any length of time.

The Vendemaire was the latest word in submarine construction, but even the best set devices equipping her for an accident of this nature, were held to be insufficient to preserve her crew's lives for more than a few hours. During the last few years, more than half a dozen French submarines have either foundered through structural defects, or have been sunk in collision. Two years ago the French submarine Pluviose collided with a channel steamer off Calais and went to the bottom. Twenty-six lives were lost in that accident. The Pluviose was of the same type as the Vendemaire.

ANDERSON AND BRIDE AGAIN BEFORE COURT

The troubles of Dr. John E. Anderson and his wife broke out again in the Quincy District Court when Dr. Anderson was again charged with assault and battery on Judge Abbott. E. very looked at teh couple, who had been married only twelve weeks and had been in court twice since that time on the same kind of a charge, and urged them to think of other things in life besides difficulties. The case was placed on file.

CARDINAL TO BLESS CHURCH CORNERSTONE

Mgr. O'Farrell, rector of St. Francis de Sales parish, Roxbury, will preach the sermon tomorrow at the mass following the cornerstone exercises at St. John's Church, Winthrop. The cornerstone will be blessed by Cardinal O'Connell at 10 o'clock. At 10:30 a low mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Hugh Roe O'Donnell, the first pastor and founder of the parish.

COLONEL GOING TO CONVENTION

CHICAGO, June 8.—William Flinn of Pittsburg—feelingly referred to by the Taft men here as "Strong Arm Bill"—chief of the wrecking crew sent out to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery of the steam roller arrived today just as the roller whistle tooted its engineers to their day's task. Mr. Flinn immediately set about his job. He tried out the monkey wrench by hitting Congressman William R. McKinley over his metaphorical head.

The National committee assembled at the Coliseum shortly after 10 o'clock for its second day's contest hearing. The remaining Arkansas cases were taken up.

AMERICAN MARINES UNDER FIRE FROM REBELS IN CUBA

HAVANA, June 8.—Reports reached here today that Cuban rebels have fired on the camps of American marines at Guantanamo city and Cobre mines. The rebels caused no damage or casualties and were driven back by the outposts, but more trouble is feared. The attacking negroes are believed to be the same band that sacked and burned the town of San Pin, near Guantanamo.

SANTIAGO, June 8.—Six thousand one-hundred United States marines and blue jackets are on Cuban soil today, ready for whatever may be required of them.

LEWIS MERRIAM OF SALEM IS CHILDREN'S BUREAU ASSISTANT

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Lewis Merriam of Salem, Mass., has been appointed assistant chief of the newly created children's bureau of the Department of Commerce and Labor. The appointment was made by Miss Julia Lathrop, chief of bureau, after conference with Secretary Nagel.

Merriam is now employed in the census bureau where he has been since 1905. He was not an applicant for the position. There were a score or more who had applied for the job, but none of the applicants quite suited the requirements of the position. The other eight available positions in the bureau will probably be filled before Miss Lathrop returns to Chicago.

PIRATES WIND UP SERIES HERE

SOUTH END GROUNDS, June 8.—The Pirates took a final whirl at the Pilgrims this afternoon. Three straight from the lowly tailenders was the count when the fun began at 3 o'clock. Clark and his band resolved to start right in to make it a clean sweep.

Kling was under the impression that it was time for the Pilgrims to do something in the winning line. In case Mertz or O'Toole pitched for the visitors he had things figured out to beat the band. Miss Beauty, who has been going none too well lately. The poor form displayed by the South Framingham lad made Manager Clark hesitate about sending him to the firing line. King put his best available man in the box, but there was no great feeling of confidence among the fans that the Bostons would turn the trick.

TROUBLE IN ROXBURY.

Considerable excitement prevailed on Washington street, near Egleston square, Roxbury, at noon today, when a crowd of strike sympathizers gathered in that vicinity and made a demonstration against a number of new motormen and conductors. So threatening was the attitude of the young men that a hurry call was sent in for the police to the Jamaica Plain Station and police were dispatched to the scene.

STRIKERS HELD BY SOMERVILLE COURT.

In Somerville police court today, Ray V. Pierce, 22 years, of Victoria street, a striking motor man, and John E. Savage, 21 years, of Cedar street, a striking conductor, both of West Somerville, pleaded not guilty of willfully delay street cars, and they were held in $300 bonds for trial Monday.

MORE VIOLENCE IN ELEVATED CAR STRIKE; MAIL CAR ATTACKED

ton, weighs more than 200, has a strong, clean-shaven face and wore a business suit of dark material.

Fifty students from Tufts College applied to the company for jobs as a result of notices that had been posted in Ballou Hall. Many other college students, it was said, had applied for work.

The strike has been on but thirty-two hours and General Bancroft declares that the company has more men than they had seventy-two hours ago.

While cars are being run on every division of the Elevated road, many people fearing violence have turned to the steam roads and are doing their traveling to and from Boston by that means. Extra trains have been put on to accommodate the additional travel.

Students Apply for Places.

Frederick R. Lincoln, who lives at No. 28 Faulkner street, Dorchester, threw a lemon at a car and hit a bystander. It was 9 o'clock last night at Fields Corner. He got three months. Patrolman Michael J. O'Rourke happened to be right behind Lincoln.

Four men found guilty of participating in strike disturbances were sentenced to jail in the Cambridge Court. They are:

Thomas J. Collins (conductor), three months in the House of Correction for assault and battery on a police officer. Appealed.

Frank H. Conway (motorman), four months at the House of Correction for obstructing a car and assault.

James Halligan (motorman), disturbing peace, thirty days in the House of Correction. Appealed.

Douglas Coleman (conductor), disturbing the peace—thirty days.

The case of James Scully (conductor), charged with stoning a car, was continued till June 30.

In the Boston court John Costello got six months for disturbing the peace and a fine of $5 for profanity.

Peter E. Carr was sent to the Island for a year—six months for throwing a stone at a policeman and another six months for throwing a missile at a car.

James McGeigan was fined $10 for intimidation in Dorchester.

One hundred Wellesley College girls, under the leadership of Professors Vida Scudder and Emily Balch of the Wellesley faculty, today agreed not to ride on cars until the men had won their strike. The girls will bear buttons reading:

BROTHERS ALL.
Hands Across the Tracks.
and
We Walk to Help Organize the Carmen.

The girls have agreed to contribute to the strike fund all of the money they save on fares.

The campaign of the Wellesley girls is a part of the campaign started today by the Women's Trade Union League to enlist the sympathy and support of the women of Boston and the young girls and students in this vicinity. At the head of the movement are Miss Anne Withington, aunt of the Withington brothers, the Harvard athletes; Miss Mabel Gillespie, a Wellesley College graduate, and the two Wellesley College professors. Five thousand buttons have been ordered. They will be sold 5 cents each, and the money given to the strike fund.

A crowd of about fifty young men, from the Tufts Square section of Somerville, invaded Magoun Square shortly after 1 o'clock this morning and bombarded a United States mail car with bricks. Eight panes of glass were broken.

Car service was resumed on all divisions of the Boston Elevated at 5:15 today, after a complete tie-up lasting since 12:40 a. m. For hours before that time, the service had been badly curtailed or stopped absolutely in many districts.

The company issued the following statement on condition during the first day:

Elevated Statement.

Division 1—Dudley Street, Forest Hills, Grove Hall, "L." O. K. Surface lines stopped all directions. No cars after dark. Lack of necessary police protection. Mob rule at and around Dudley street. Stones and missiles being thrown from roofs.

Division 2—Roxbury, Jamaica Plain,

WHAT BANCROFT SAYS

Cars were mobbed by turbulent crowds of hoodlums or drunken men.

We have imported no strike-breakers and have no need to do so.

All the trouble occurred after dark.

All we ask is that our men shall be so protected that they will not have their heads broken.

Not a man at any of the power plants has gone out. Most of them have personally testified to their loyalty—Statement by General William A. Bancroft, president of the Elevated.

General Bancroft, Elevated Chief.

Brookline, Lenox street, everything all right, excepting on Center street, Jamaica Plain, near Plant's factory, where rails were greased after dark.

Lines along Cedar street stopped.

Division 3—Fields Corner, Dorchester, Ashmont and Milton practically nothing moving. Mobs of about 5,000 rioting around Field's Corner. Inadequate police protection.

Division 4—East Boston and one line to Chelsea, only one man did not report. He may be sick. Not known to be striker. Everything running smoothly. No police needed.

Division 5—All cars running in South Boston, with two officers and in some cases double crews, except Bay View line. In East district street lights are all out and conditions does not dare run in the dark. No cars.

Boiders on Track.

Division 6—Somerville, Everett, Malden, everything O. K., except Somerville and Medford cars running through Somerville. Rioting in Magoun square and Teele square. Poor police protection. On Mystic avenue, Elsiwer line, mob put fifteen rail boiders on track shortly after dark. Removed by Elevated men under police protection. No cars to be run here.

Division 7—Cambridge, Belmont, Watertown, no trouble. Some double crews.

Division 9—Brighton, Newton, Watertown, Back Bay, everything satisfactory. No trouble at all. Absolutely same as before strike.

"L" and Cambridge subway regular. Company has plenty of men and with proper protection can give regular service. But superintendents are notified not to send out cars if there is any danger of trouble or of having them smashed up.

All night cars taken off and nothing running from 1 until daybreak. Then regular schedule resumed.

Night cars off to give police chance to rest up. Power house employees nearly all declared loyal. No intention of going out has been heard by company. Could not state as to per cent. of cars running.

GOUGH, "L" Office.

Opposed to this is a statement given out by Organizer Fay of the Union, as follows:

I have been all over the system of the Boston Elevated Company, and I wish to say that the outlook is exceedingly bright, as over twenty per cent. of the regular cars being taken from the barns, and then at very irregular intervals. This estimate of the number of cars that are being run, is a very liberal estimate.

I also find that the old men, many of them with service stripes showing from fifteen to thirty years of service, are now enrolling in our ranks.

At the barn at Roxbury Crossing two men, both wearing four service stripes, came to my automobile and told me that they had made a mistake, but had repaired it by enrolling, and that they were at work, endeavoring to have the other old men on the division join the union.

SERVICE BAD ALL OVER CITY

At Division 3, in Dorchester, the situation is entirely in our hands, few cars leaving the barns, the majority of those being handled by officials of the company, a fact that was about the same on all the other divisions of the company.

Claim South Boston Gains.

Division 5, in South Boston, was one of the pleasant surprises I found. Before the strike meeting we very seldom saw a man from that division at any of the meetings, but when we arrived this afternoon we found that we would be compelled to hire a hall and hold a special meeting for the purpose of enrolling and initiating the many men of that division who had joined during the day. I believe that we will enroll two-thirds of the men of that division at the meeting tonight.

We will have the Boston Elevated system so tied up by Monday that they won't have a car running, declared Fred Fay, organizer, today. The public is with us and we are going to win.

There are less than 25 per cent. of the regular employes at work and few cars today. Such cars as are being operated are manned by superintendents, inspectors, foremen, instructors and professional strike-breakers. Of the discharged union men in the service we have 4,000 with us.

280 Join in South Boston.

At the big mass meeting we held in South Boston 280 new men joined the union. There were very few of the South Boston men enrolled before, but before another day we expect to have nearly every man on that division.

If General Bancroft has the men he claims he has, why doesn't he put them on the cars. He claims there are not enough police to protect the men.

IF THE MEN CONTINUE DESERTING AT THE PRESENT RATE, HE WILL NEED A POLICEMAN TO EVERY MOTORMAN AND CONDUCTOR.

The wages paid the motormen and conductors in Boston are the lowest paid street car men in any city the size of Boston in the United States and Canada.

The alleged rioting, it claims, has been incited by detectives in the employ of the strike-breaking agents, who have these men circulate among the crowds to incite the latter to find time to lay the odium of it to the men.

Additional cars are in readiness, notice that the State Militia is ready to act if it becomes necessary.

Assistant United States Attorney William H. Lunt, in conference with Vice President Russell Sears of the Boston Elevated on the possibility of Federal intervention should the mob service be interfered with.

Vol. 6. May Take Hand.

The conference was the result of a previous conference of Mr. Garland and United States Marshal Guy Murchie, when they agreed to be prepared for any emergency that might arise. Mr. Garland called on Mr. Sears at the Elevated offices on Milk street, where the various problems which might be confronted were gone over.

"It is possible that an injunction may be asked today, restraining the Boston terminal, against leaders of the strike, asking that the Elevated be prevented from interfering with United States mail cars on the Elevated system," says Mr. Garland. "Little trouble is anticipated as United States mail car broken by rioting men may result in the intervening of the Federal authorities."

Chief Postoffice Inspector Letherman was apprised of the wrecking of the mail car and this morning is expected to take personal interest in the handling of the rioters.

If this is done it will put a new aspect on the rioting, as the laws governing interference with the mails are far more severe than the statutes covering the obstructing of street car service.

The first stone was directed at Motorman A. McClain, who has been in the service twenty-five years, and the missile evidently came from a well-directed and powerful hand, for it penetrated the wooden vestibule fully three-quarters of an inch.

All along Warren street the mail car was the target of a fusillade, and the rattling glass from the windows cut a gash in Conductor James F. Ryan's face.

Street car service was practically suspended in Boston and vicinity early last night. It stopped altogether at midnight. Before that the older men who have refused to join the union took cars running very nearly on schedule.

Five hundred more uniformed employes of the "L" joined the union during the day according to the organizer of the union. Organizer Fred Fay claims the new Boston local now has an enrolment of more than 4,000 members. The total force of uniformed men employed by the Boston Elevated Railway numbers about 6,000.

The "L" officials charge that the suspension of the service is due to the failure of the police to afford sufficient protection. Superintendent Pierce says, however, that the department would furnish all the protection needed today. Stringent orders to the men have been issued by the leaders not to molest passengers. The men have respected this injunction. Up to midnight not one serious accident or injury of a passenger had been reported.

The first shot fired shattered the glass of an Elevated train window. Patrolman Frank Fitzpatrick of police headquarters had a narrow escape from death, as the ball passed through the car within a few inches of his head. The train was inward bound on the Washington street elevated between Eustis and Warren streets, Roxbury. The shot was probably fired from the second story of a building in the vicinity. After shattering the glass the bullet passed out of the open window on the opposite side of the train.

Passengers Leave Car.

The passengers were frightened. Many left the train at the Northampton street station. A squad of police were hurried to the neighborhood where the shot was fired, but were unable to make an arrest.

Later a north-bound Elevated train was fired upon in Charlestown and passengers and trainmen had narrow escapes.

Every surface line operating from Dudley street terminal was discontinued at nightfall. Many lines running from Grove Hall were suspended when trouble broke out. Every line in Somerville and Milton was discontinued. Thousands paraded the streets of those sections.

The tracks on Centre street, Jamaica Plain, were greased, car service had to be suspended and cannot be resumed until the tracks have been thoroughly washed. The city lights on the Bay View line in South Boston were extinguished that night, so the cars ran in plain why. The car service was suspended.

Every line in Somerville and Medford was shut down. The Elevated Company charged that the police of those cities would not or could not give the cars any protection. Many thousand fifteen old boulders on the tracks along Mystic avenue, Somerville. This tied up the Sullivan square line. Trouble arose at Fields Corner. Rotten eggs were hurled at the non-union men operating cars. Two men were arrested.

There were thousands of people packed along Dorchester avenue within the quarter of a mile between the car barn and Freeport street. Few in the crowd were "L" employes. The majority were boys and young men looking for excitement.

Thousands of people gathered in Cottage square, Dorchester. The Norfolk Street line was discontinued. Superintendent Pierce, at 10 o'clock, declared he had plenty of men to run the cars, but that the Boston police department would not afford the cars protection.

"Out of our force of 4,000 uniformed men on this division," asserted Wilkins, "only 241 are out."

At Woodlawn car was stoned on Main street, Everett. The windows were smashed, but none of the passengers was injured. All the cars leaving the Everett car barn were manned with double crews after dark.

HERE IS THE LAW WHICH PROVIDES JAIL FOR RIOTERS

Here is the law under which the courts of Greater Boston are now sending to jail or fining disturbers during the present "L" strike:

Whoever wilfully throws or shoots a missile at a street railway car, or at a person on such car, or in any way assaults or interferes with a conductor or motorman while in the performance of his duty on or near a street railway car, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. A person so offending may be arrested without a warrant by an officer authorized to serve criminal process and kept in custody in jail or other convenient place not more than 24 hours.

Whoever unlawfully uses, removes or removes with any tools or appliances carried on the cars as required by sec. 216, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100, or by imprisonment for not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Whoever unlawfully uses, retentionally injures, molests or destroys any signal of a street railway corporation, or any railroad corporation, or any fixtures, or mechanism used in connection with such signal on a street railway, or destroys or in any way interferes with the proper working of such signal, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment of not more than two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

No person shall, by intimidation or force, prevent or seek to prevent any person from entering into or continuing in the employment of any person or corporation.

Whoever violates any provision of this act for which no specific penalty is provided shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100.

POLICE GUARD ALL LINES

Many motormen and conductors applied for their wages at the car barns. They claim that the officials refused to pay them unless they surrendered their badges and transfer punches. The men say they were compelled to make a deposit covering the value of these insignia of employment at the time they went to work for the company, so that "L" has no right to hold up their wages.

Hundreds of people who had waited long in Sullivan square for cars to Somerville were told they would have to walk home, or else take elevated trains back to the North Station and go home by the Boston & Maine Railroad.

A brick was thrown through a window of an inward-bound train on the Main street Elevated in Charlestown early in the evening.

A boisterous crowd held up a North Cambridge car near Massachusetts avenue and Russell street. Sergeant Ellis and Lieutenant Cox came to the rescue of the car crew.

The crowd was angered by the interference of the police, and seemed on the point of attacking the officers. Sergeant Ellis drew his revolver and discharged it several times. He threatened to shoot into the crowd if they did not move.

Thomas J. Collins, twenty-three, of No. 2271 Massachusetts avenue, put up a fight when the officers tried to arrest him. He was clubbed into submission.

Frank H. Conway, twenty-two, of No. 1 Yorktown street, a former motorman, was also arrested.

Conductor to Hospital.

The conductor of an Adams street car was assaulted at Grove Hall and so seriously injured the police took him to a hospital.

Edward Burke, motorman on a Dorchester car was attacked by two strikers who jumped onto his car near Fields Corner. He fought them off and sent the car along Dorchester avenue at full speed until he distanced the crowd.

After he had made three more trips a pain in his chest became so troublesome that Burke went to the hospital. The doctors found that he had two fractured ribs.

At midnight the last opportunity for the men to get their jobs expired, according to the "L" officials. The company issued a statement that all men who applied before midnight would be given back their regular runs.

Special trains are being operated from the North and South stations to take care of the extra traffic caused by the strike. Nine specials were sent out from the South Station during the rush hour.

Three special trains will be run over the Shawmut branch to Milton Junction to take care of the traffic to Fields Corner, Ashmont and Norwood.

The same number will be run on the Mattapan division to Dorchester. They will stop at Bird street, Mt. Bowdoin, Harvard street and Dorchester avenue.

Run Special Trains.

Three specials will go out over the Providence division to Roxbury, Heath street, Jamaica Plain and Forest Hills.

The traffic on the suburban trains was the heaviest in the history of the railroads, according to a statement given out by the Elevated 90 per cent. of the cars were being operated, practically on schedule, except in Division 3, where 70 per cent. were operated.

On his return from an automobile tour of the entire system, Organizer Frank Fay of the carmen's union declared that a scant 25 per cent. of the company's cars were being handled.

Five hundred people surrounded an inward bound Forest Hills car at the corner of Dimock street and Columbus avenue, cut the trolley rope, yanked the conductor and motorman from their places and then proceeded to smash the windows.

The motorman and conductor were being pummelled in lively fashion when three policemen came up Columbus avenue on the run. The crowd fled with the appearance of the bluecoats.

The motorman and conductor resumed their stations and the wrecked car was taken to the repair shops.

At the corner of Townsend and Washington streets another car was intercepted.

"Come off that car, you scab," shouted the leaders as they laid hands on the motorman and the conductor. The latter put up a vigorous battle with switch sticks before being hauled into the street. Then the car was allowed to continue. No time was lost in demolishing the car windows.

As a precaution against serious trouble, once with the street car service in Cambridge, a number of barges of the old-fashioned picnic type were taken over to that city. They will carry passengers to the city today for a ten-cent fare.

The power was shut off in sections of various systems of the Elevated so that in case the wires were cut no damage would result. The Bay State Railway discontinued their through cars to the Dudley street terminal because of the strike.

Occasional cars were run from the Dudley street terminal in trains of two, unconnected. They were of the prepayment, open-convertible type, and all the windows were lowered and the shades were

WHAT STRIKERS SAY

The Boston Elevated Railway Company yesterday operated less than 25 per cent. of its usual car service.

Today the number of cars will be very much less. There are already 4,000 union men on strike on the Boston Elevated system.

The union has already won the strike.—At every point the men are fully confident of victory.—Statement by Fred Fay, organizer of the trolley men's union and leader of the strike.

HARVARD COLLEGE NOT TAKING SIDES IN TROLLEY STRIKE

Editor AMERICAN:

Stories appearing in recent numbers of your paper under captions suggesting that Harvard students are acting as strike-breakers with the tacit support of university officers are not true. Harvard University is an educational institution. It has not been a party, it will not be a party, to an industrial dispute. In anticipation of the strike the Harvard Students' Employment Office has sent no men to the Boston Elevated Railway Company, and it will take pains to preserve the attitude of a non-combatant. Individual students are at liberty to go as they please, but their activity, whether in assisting strikers or in assisting the Boston Elevated Railway, is without the knowledge of the support of the university officers. EDWARD EVERETT HALE, Secretary of Students' Employment Bureau.

Columbus Statue Unveiled at Capital

Big Bay State Delegation of K. of C. Join in Great Ceremony.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The United States paid homage today to the discoverer of America by the unveiling of a magnificent memorial statue and fountain, erected by Congress to Christopher Columbus.

One hundred thousand visitors crowded within the city, according to the estimates of the committee conducting the ceremonies. Half of that number are members of the Knights of Columbus, gathered from near and far.

The enthusiasm in Washington is rivalled only by the inauguration of a President.

Imposing unveiling ceremonies were held this afternoon. President Taft spoke his praises of the man who made the United States possible.

In recognition of the allegiance of Columbus to the King of Italy, the Marquis Cusani Boarillonlerl, the Italian Ambassador at Washington, was invited to unveil the memorial by releasing two American flags whose folds clung to the granite shaft and marble statue of Columbus surrounding the fountain.

A pageant of military and civic splendor accompanied the ceremonies.

Judge Dowling's Tribute.

In his speech at the unveiling of the monument, Victor J. Dowling, Justice of the Supreme Court of New York, paid a warm tribute to the life and deeds of the great navigator, reviewing at length the impediments which he met and overcame. Judge Dowling then drew a striking parallel between the greatness of the explorer's achievement and the paucity of its latter day recognition. He said in part:

"It is fitting that after centuries recognition should be given, sincere if tardy of his great services to humanity, and given the more cheerfully because he was in every way worthy of the portion of undying fame which is his. It is the appreciation of his nobility of character which is leading to the spreading movement to make Columbus Day a holiday in which twenty-three states have now joined, and to whose ranks, it is to be hoped, the nation itself will soon be added.

"Here in the capitol of the greatest republic in history, this beautiful memorial of the greatest achievement in human affairs, due to the initiative, determination and genius of a single individual, may well serve as an inspiration and effort upon the part of the citizens of America to do as he did—to set their ideals high, never to lower or abase them, and to persevere to the end in their advocacy.

Spirit of True Freedom.

"While civilization endures emblazoned upon the first page of its records shall be preserved in undying fame the original coat of arms claimed by Christopher Columbus, with its bars of red and blue upon a field of gold; in memory of the greatest benefaction which the spirit of exploration, of discovery and of enterprise has given to the world. May there forever be found upon the same page the banner of red and white and blue of our beloved country in memory of the greatest blessing which the spirit of true freedom has yet conferred upon mankind."

One thousand Massachusetts Knights of Columbus were out bright and early today for the ceremonies. Forming in line, they marched in the parade prior to the unveiling.

The Bay State men have been royally entertained and have received many courtesies from the Congressmen from their State.

Louis Watson, State deputy, is at the Congress Hall with a party of friends. Representative Curley has distributed 500 cards to the Capitol galleries and departments, among the visitors. Among the supreme officers of the order here are Joseph Pelletier, supreme advocate, of Boston; W. J. McGinley, supreme secretary, of New Haven; and the Rev. P. J. McGivney, supreme chaplain, of Connecticut.

R. I. GIRL IS EUGENIC BRIDE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 8.—The first eugenic marriage in America—with health certificates backing up the regular license to wed—took place in Providence at noon today, when Miss Anna B. Bowen, of Bridgham street, this city, was married to Gilbert R. Cutler, owner of a chain of bakeries throughout New England and son of Rev. Gilbert Cutler of Boston.

The "health" marriage is the result of the convictions of the couple that one of the first things to be considered by people about to marry is the matter of health. So both of them visited the office of Dr. W. H. Peters of No. 198 Benefit street, this city, and soon afterwards received their certificates.

Both bride and groom are enthusiastic disciples of the philosophy eugenics, which recently gained much publicity through the discussion started by a Chicago minister. Leading women physicians of Boston entered into a discussion of the matter.

"I have had the idea for several years," declared Cutler today. "It is the real theory of marriage. To marry, a couple must be perfectly healthy. To have healthy children the couple must themselves be healthy. Thus health is the essential for happiness."

Dr. W. V. Chapin, head of the City Board of Health, differs with Cutler, declaring that he doesn't believe in the idea as a law permitting only healthy persons to marry could really not work any great good, in his opinion.

The ceremony today took place at the home of the bride's mother on Hope street. Rev. Mr. Cutler, of Boston, father of the groom, officiated.

GENERAL J. G. WILSON SUES HIS DAUGHTER

NEW YORK, June 8.—General James Grant Wilson, distinguished soldier and author, who knew intimately King Edward VII. of England, President Lincoln, President Grant, Washington Irving and Gladstone, asked Surrogate Cohalan to compel his daughter, Mrs. Frank Sylvester Hedley, to file an accounting as executrix of the estate of her mother, who died on April 10, 1904. Mrs. Wilson left $200,000. She gave her husband a trust fund to yield him $2,000 a year and gave the remainder of her estate to her daughter.

General Wilson, who is eighty, said through counsel that he received the $2,000 income until last year, when payment ceased.

HINDS BETTER, GOES HOME FOR CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Asher C. Hinds, a Maine Congressman, is so much improved in health that he expects to go home next week to prepare for the direction of his campaign. It was stated at his office today that Congressman Hinds' breakdown was due to anaemia, and was not primarily a nervous collapse.

Groom Missing Month; Wedding Called Off

Lowell Miss Tired of Waiting for Fiance Who Took Ring and Disappeared.

LOWELL, June 8.—After waiting a month for Louis Avixie, whom she was to marry, Miss Cora Ann Jalbert today abandoned her wedding plans. Her mother has had the marriage license cancelled.

Avixie, who is twenty-one, disappeared the day he was to have married Miss Jalbert, who is eighteen. Since then Miss Jalbert and her mother, Mrs. Harry O. Jalbert, have been keeping a sharp lookout for him.

Louis and Cora Ann were scheduled to be married at the Notre Dame De Lourdes Church Sunday, May 5. On the morning of that day the young man and his bride to be attended mass together and on their return to the girl's home Louis asked for the wedding ring and marriage certificate and left the house for the purpose, he said, of visiting his mother. He has not been seen by his friends since.

MRS. SCHENCK SET FREE BY COURT ON POISONING CHARGE

WHEELING, W. Va., June 8.—Laura Farnsworth Schenck, accused of poisoning her husband, John O. Schenck, wealthy pork packer, is a free woman. In the criminal court today Judge Jordan dismissed the case, handing down a decision on the motion of Mr. Schenck's counsel for dismissal. The decision was based on a section of the state code which provides for the dismissal of a case after it has been carried through three terms of court at the instance of the State.

ASSASSIN SHOOTS AT CROTIA VICEROY

AGRIM, Croatia, June 8.—An assassin fired three shots at the Viceroy of Croatia today while he was in an auto with his wife and two secretaries. Gendarmes seized the shooter and he was nearly beaten to death before he was lodged in jail. None of the shots struck the viceroy. One of the viceregal secretaries was wounded.

THAW IS OUT AGAIN IN FREEDOM FIGHT

MATTEAWAN, N. Y., June 8.—"I want a ticket only one way; hope I will not need the return part," said Harry K. Thaw today when he started to White Plains, where his attorneys were to make another effort to free him from confinement here in the State Hospital for Criminal Insane. Pursuant to a Supreme Court order, Thaw's residence during the trial of his suit will be the White Plains jail. A hospital attendant accompanied him.

NUDE CHILDREN AS HIGH PRICE PROTEST

CHICAGO, June 8.—Naked children by the score will, it is planned, appear on the streets through the congested quarter of the West Side of the city, as a striking protest against the suffering brought to some need children by reason of the high cost of kosher meat. This was decided upon at a meeting of Hebrew mothers in a West Side hall.

CALLS DOCTOR, ENDS HER LIFE

Miss Lena Hayes, thirty-five years old, was found dead in the kitchen of her home at No. 56 Bickenstaff street, Back Bay, today, by Dr. H. A. Polley of No. 333 Columbus avenue, who went to the house in answer to a strange telephone message sent to him by Miss Hayes. The voice over the 'phone said: "I am going to take a long sleep, come quick. You will find the key to the front door under the doormat."

It is believed the woman killed herself by poison after calling up the doctor.

Medical Examiner Leary ordered the body removed to the City Hospital morgue, South End, where an autopsy will be performed. The police found liquor and drugs in the house. They were taken to Station No. 10 on Boylston street. Little is known about the woman other than that she was a hairdresser and pretty.

ADVERTISING MEN TO HOLD FIELD DAY

The advertising clubs of New England will hold a joint field day at Rocky Point, Warwick, R. I., on Tuesday, June 25, under the auspices of the Town Criers of Providence. The members of the Pilgrim Publicity Association will be conveyed to Providence on a special train. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the Pilgrims consists of H. Wesley Curtis, Edward D. Kollock, Walter H. Anderton, Carroll J. Swan and John W. Withington.

FLEAS ARE KILLING THE FINEST TERRIER

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—The world's most perfect Boston terrier, owned by Miss Jessie Crocker and valued at $10,000, is dying at owner's kennels at Hillsborough. The animal is afflicted with the malady known as "little Johnny Jones," which causes the victim in most cases to scratch itself to death. This disease has cost Miss Crocker more than twenty pets within the last two years.

SENATOR GAMBLE CLAIMS A VICTORY

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Senator Gamble today announced that he had received telegrams from South Dakota showing the primary returns give him 500 plurality, with several other precincts to be heard from. Sterling is running second, Richards third and Grigsby fourth.

ENDS LIFE WITH ELECTRIC NEEDLE

PITTSBURG, June 8.—Using an electric needle attached by wire to an electric light, Charles Beals, aged forty-three, chef at the Union depot restaurant, was electrocuted in a most unusual manner today in his home here. Beals inserted the needle near the heart and paralyzed that organ.

COURT RESTORES CHAUFFEUR OUSTED BY MAYOR BURNS

Martin E. Driscoll, chauffeur of the Somerville police department automobile, who was discharged by Mayor Burns two months ago, after a hearing in the Mayor's office, has been ordered restored to his position by Michael J. Farrell, assistant justice of the Somerville police court.

Driscoll was summoned before Mayor Burns to answer the charges of intoxication, neglect of duty and disorderly conduct. Driscoll had been appointed under the civil service rules. He appealed to the court. Assistant Justice Farrell, in examining the evidence, rendered his decision that Driscoll is not guilty on account of insufficient evidence. He orders that he be restored to his former position and that his salary for the last two months be paid by the city.

BURMESE PRINCE STEAMED THROUGH BIG FIELD OF ICE

A story of an experience in a vast field of ice, in which were four huge icebergs and many smaller ones, was told by the crew of the British steamship Burmese Prince, Captain McDougal, which arrived in port from China, Japan and the Philippines. The find was encountered near the scene of the Titanic catastrophe. The ship had taken the North Atlantic course.

Sunday night a fog settled. At 8 o'clock Monday morning the fog lifted and the ice was seen. The only passenger on board was Miss V. M. Wakeman of Hamden, Conn., a teacher in Lagos.

PRICES ARE SOARING BEFORE CONVENTION

CHICAGO, June 8.—Cafe proprietors, expecting a rush of business and a chance to make a harvest, will have advance prices for the convention crowds. New menu cards, some of which have already appeared, show an advance in nearly all dishes from 10 to 15 per cent. In nearly all of the downtown cafes "convention prices" will prevail next week. In the hotels, rooms which are usually $2.00 a day will be $3; rooms usually from $4 to $6 a day will be $5 and $10.

POLICE GUARD G. O. P. MEETING

While the committee was in session Flinn gave out a statement, saying:

"There will be a big pow-wow of Roosevelt men here early next week. When we are through we'll have the Taft forces backed against the ropes and begging us to let them up. Roosevelt has sent out a personal call to his friends. The biggest men in the country will be here within a day or two. Roosevelt may come himself."

Flinn Raps McKinley.

Asked if he was going to tamper with the steam roller machinery, Flinn said some things about McKinley.

"Aw, that sounds just like McKinley's talk," he said. "He talks nothing but blather. If he keeps it up Taft may get the Utah delegation, but that'll be about all."

Asked if he intended to visit the Coliseum, Flinn remarked:

"I don't want to get pinched. Just tell me the minute I got in town McKinley began yelling for the police. They've got a guard of detectives down here now. I don't want to go to jail my first few hours in Chicago, so maybe I'll stay away today. Also, maybe I won't."

Flinn denied he had been sent to supersede Dixon.

"McKinley probably started that also," he said.

While Flinn was talking the whistle of the steam roller tooted again. It had just run over two more Roosevelt delegates. The Taft men in the Third Arkansas District were seated.

The Roosevelt men here admitted for the first time today that their leader will return. The admission came after a long distance telephone conversation with Oyster Bay.

Colonel to Be on Hand.

The Colonel will be on hand by the middle of next week. By that time the intention of the "steam roller" engineers to continue their "joy ride" over the Roosevelt forces will be fully demonstrated, the Roosevelt leaders say, and any action that the Colonel may take will be a protest against the "machine methods employed against him."

That the Taft program is going through without a hitch is demonstrated by two things:

First—The end of the Indiana compromise situation.

Second—By the coming conference of the Roosevelt men.

Indiana has a peculiar place in the delegate squabble. It is the first case on the list in which Taft men are willing to admit that the Roosevelt ites have any merit behind their contentions. Its coming has been eagerly awaited by the men watching the crushing advance of the "steam roller."

Indiana Situation.

Indiana has thirty delegates. The seats of twelve are contested. Among these are the four delegates-at-large. On the Taft delegation are Sen. Beveridge, former Congressman James E. Watson, and Joseph D. Oliver of South Bend. On the Roosevelt delegation, the names of ex-Senator Beveridge, ex-Congressman Landis, ex-Indiana Republican Chairman Edwin M. Lee and Charles H. Campbell appear.

In spite of the fact that most of these men bear "Ex" before the designations, they are the biggest Republican politicians in the State. Indiana has gone Democratic in three elections; the control of the "Machine" has switched from the Fairbanks crowd to the Beveridge crowd and back again.

Roosevelt men today said that the refusal of the Taft men to compromise a case wherein so many prominent politicians were interested, and thereby avoid embarrassment indicated that the Taft men need the delegates. The Taft men don't view it just that way. They say they don't need to give the Roosevelt men anything, and they don't expect to turn the national committee into a charitable institution.

Detectives on Deck.

A squad of plain clothes men appeared at the Coliseum today to guard the national committee members. According to the story that reached here, the demonstration was to be like a "mob scene" in a play. The committee members were angry at the threat of "intimidation."

Reports that the Illinois delegation was not enthusiastic in its support of Roosevelt and that while they would follow instructions and vote for him they would not back him in his fights were heard today. As many as 45 of the 58 instructed for the Colonel may vote for Senator Root for temporary and permanent chairman. Roosevelt leaders are practically convinced that they will not be able to make a successful fight against Root, even if they can get delegates to nominate the Colonel.

Talk of a bolt is still maintaining a prominent part in the convention gossip. The Taft men are seeing to it that it does not die down. Almost every statement issued contains some reference to it, and the Taft men today began a quiet canvass to find out how many delegates the Colonel would take with him if he called his men out. The Taft men are confident a bolt will occur.

CHILDREN SEE DURBAR VIEWS

Fifty thousand little schoolchildren of Boston helped to entertain about 2,000 little children of Boston at Tremont Temple today, where they witnessed a presentation of that most wonderful of all motion picture productions, in full color, "The Durbar in Kinemacolor," as guests of the AMERICAN.

To the little tots this was one of the greatest pleasures they ever had, for the reels most appealing to children were used, together with other interesting natural color motion picture subjects specially brought for the occasion from the New York office of the Kinemacolor Company.

Beside the pageants and reception of the Boston children to King George and Queen Mary, who were on their way to Delhi to be crowned as Emperor and Empress of India, many of the ceremonial scenes were shown. These are so full of life and brilliancy that, even though the little ones perhaps were not able to understand what it is all about, they enjoyed them just as much.

The preparations for the elephant pageant, showing how the Indian princes had their elephants painted and decorated with gold and jewels and decked them with shimmering silks and satins, gave more pleasure than a circus parade, while the views in the stockade, where the huge beasts are at play, and their bathing hour in the river, was a never-to-be-forgotten privilege.

Mayor Fitzgerald's smiling face came on the screen about ten feet high, while the King and Queen of England, to say nothing of Queen Edith, the beautiful Begum of Bhopal, "performed" at this unique occasion. Practically every orphan asylum in, town and from some of the suburbs attended. Automobiles were on hand to take the crippled kiddies home.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

A great crowd is the outlook at the automobile races at Rockingham Park this afternoon. The program is an attractive one and some keen racing should result in every event.

The twenty-mile match race between Harry Grant, driving a Berkshire, Harry Cobe piloting the big Jackson car and Charley Basle at the helm of a ninety-horsepower Chadwick will furnish a lot of thrills and very fast time.

All three of the drivers have driven in big national races. Cobe will drive the car that he piloted in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis a year ago.

The professional races have a fine field of starters. All three of the men in the special twenty-mile race will drive in the money events together with Le Cain in a Stutz, Jessop in a Buick, Hart in a National and Endeeck in a Lexington.

Fred Collins of Dorchester owns the big Chadwick which Leland Hewett will drive in a special match race against Charley Basle in a Bianci for five miles. Hersey has never started in a professional race but Dorchester motorists pin their faith to him as he has earned quick a reputation in the speed line.

The Bianci that Basle will pilot is said to develop 120 horsepower. It has a short wheel base and will have a big advantage over the Chadwick in making the turns.

The races start at 2 o'clock. This will give Boston motorists plenty of opportunity to drive their cars to the park, which is only thirty-five miles.

The trip can be made easily in an hour and a half as the road is over the best highways in the State.

J. J. Cole, president of the Cole Motor Car Company, Indianapolis manufacturers of the Cole car, for which E. Reed H. J. Habich Company of this city are the State distributors, together with William L. Colt of New York, were guests of honor at an informal luncheon at the Hotel Thorndike yesterday afternoon.

Cole Eastern agents listened to interesting talks made by the guests and the Habich brothers.

Mr. Cole is making a tour among the Cole representatives through the East with a view of cementing a closer feeling of friendship between manufacturer, agents and owners.

Among those present at the luncheon were W. A. Irving of Irving & Grant, Salem; W. W. Whitney, Lynn; Herbert Ellis, Lawrence; H. S. Knickerbocker, Worcester; William H. Baxter, Springfield; W. H. Alexander, Concord, N. H., and H. S. Bowen, Providence, R. I.

Mr. Cole and Mr. Colt left the city last evening for Albany, Utica, Syracuse and Buffalo. Charles F. Henderson, the general sales manager for the Cole Motor Car Company, has been with the party but left them in Portland to visit the Cole representatives at Montreal and Toronto. He joins the party at Buffalo.

U. S. TO KEEP HISTORY OF EVERY PUPIL IN THE COUNTRY

According to plans formulated by the United States Bureau of Education every child in the elementary schools of the country is to be card-catalogued, and a running history of his entire school career kept permanently on file.

This plan, known as the Boston system, was inaugurated in this city two years ago by Charles M. Lamprey, master at the Boston Normal school.

The object of the tabulation is to afford correct statistics for definite and scientific study of the progress of education in this country.

MANY MATCHES FOR M'GOORTY

If Eddie McGoorty is successful in dodging a knockout when he exchanges swats with Jimmy Gardner in Boston next Wednesday he will figure as Jack Dillon's opponent in a ten-round affair at Benton Harbor, Mich., the show to be staged on the afternoon of July 4 by Promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons. The latter has Dillon signed and while McGoorty would not affix his name to a set of articles he said he was satisfied with the conditions, but preferred that his manager, Marty Forkins, close the clash.

The weight is to be 158 pounds at 10 o'clock and Eddie agreed to make that figure. This was the only matter the Michigan promoter feared would bail the proceedings. Floyd put McGoorty in Chicago just before Eddie started for the East to get in shape for the Gardner battle.

Morrow for Winner.

The winner is to be matched against Howard Morrow, now under the management of Tommy Ryan. It was Fitzsimmons' plan to get Morrow and McGoorty, but Howard will not move in the manager. The Dillon-McGoorty match is planned for the ball park and the promoter says he can sell all the people that care to attend. And Floyd looks for a big crowd, for Benton Harbor is usually packed to overflow with visitors on the day.

The match should be a good one. Dillon must be considered among the topnotchers. He has beaten some of the best men in his division, recently disposing of Hugh Kelly by the knockout route in three rounds. McGoorty fought Kelly not so long ago and only bested him in ten.

Has Eastern Offers.

Several Eastern matches await McGoorty, all depending, however, on his showing with Gardner. His battle with Moha lost him much of his prestige and he has to regain this by a decisive win over the Lowell boxer before he can claim the place at the top of the heap of middleweights now fighting for the honor once held by Ketchel.

Probably Eddie's fighting is affected because of managerial trouble. At present Forkins is acting as his pilot, but Patsy Callahan, his former manager, seems to follow the middleweight from town to town. When Eddie fought Moha, Callahan was on the scene, and McGoorty feared that Patsy would attach his money. Callahan claims that there is a difference to-day between he and his former charge.

In stacking up against Jimmy Gardner, Eddie will find some battler if the Lowell kid is right. Gardner at his best is some fighter, and he will make McGoorty go at his best to get better than an even break.

WELLS AND WILSON PUT UP TAME BOUT

UTICA, N. Y., June 8.—Matt Wells, lightweight champion of England, and Bobbie Wilson of this city put up a rather tame fight here last night. Both gave a clever exhibition of fast footwork and clever blocking, but few stiff punches were landed by either during the bout.

Wilson proved more clever on the defence and had the better of the infighting.

SOLDIERS TO PLAY BALL.

The baseball teams of Fort Banks and Fort Warren will clash this afternoon and noon on the Fort Banks grounds. The game will be called at 2:30. The soldiers of both forts have strong teams, and a hard battle is anticipated.

M'INTOSH PLANS BIGGEST ARENA

Is High D. McIntosh, the Australian fight promoter who staged the Johnson-Jeffries championship fight in Sydney, selling something to his townsmen, or has the American pugilistic world lost confidence in the ability of its promoters? This is the question that arises from a story printed in the Sydney, N. S. W., Bulletin, one of the leading sporting journals of that country. Besides telling of the wonderful plan on the part of McIntosh to turn the stadium into the world's greatest boxing arena, the story imparts the information that Hugh is to make his way to this country to take hold of a club in the states that is to surpass anything that we have seen thus far.

Little Chance for McIntosh.

That McIntosh is trying to make his people believe that boxing cannot succeed properly without his connections and that he is merely making a great man of himself at the expense of others, is the belief of the writer. The story as printed in the Bulletin does not say just who McIntosh is ordering with nor where the place is that the wonderful club is to be. The only reference as to location is that the arena will be in the United States. Some small spot in the United States? With such promoters as Jimmy Coffroth, Jack Curley, Tom McRoy, Charles Harvey, Billy Roche and a few the many others, it is very doubtful whether McIntosh can break in under the Stars and Stripes unless he is ready to furnish the bankroll.

Wants Champ and Langford.

American promoters have long been staging little cores and doubtless will continue to do so without the assistance of our Australian friend. A letter that accompanied the clipping tells of Hugh's aim to get Jack Johnson and Sam Langford in a battle in Sydney, this to go through as soon after the Flynn fight as matters can be ready. A guarantee of $30,000 is offered the champion. The clipping as printed in the Bulletin reads:

"Hugh D. McIntosh has commenced the work of erecting on the Sydney Stadium, and that ball of stoush will be a fine place when the improvements have been carried through. The size of the great enclosure will be in no way reduced and the unsightly boardings on its walls will give way to an ornamental front and elegant sides. The entrances will be of a new and improved design, by which a crowd will pass in about a dozen abreast, and yet be capable of perfect check. All the present office buildings are coming down, and will be replaced with elegant structures.

Camps Near Structure.

"Training rooms and gymnasiums will be erected close to the main structure so that the whole of the training can be carried on close to the scene of battle. A complete bath suite will be installed for the use of the athletes. In the stadium itself the improvements will be considerable. A movably decorated sounding board will be placed over the ring, to save strain on the voice of announcer and make the place available for public meetings, concerts, etc.

"A huge array of exits will make it possible for 100,000 thousands of people into the street in about two and one-half minutes. Electric lights, capable of giving instantaneous photographs, will be set up over and around the ring, so that pictures can be taken quite day. When all these improvements have been carried out the boxing season in Sydney will begin this Winter, so that the best fighters of the world will be engaged for the circuit of the United States, Paris and Sydney.

To Promote in States.

"For McIntosh's appearance in the United States seems to be an assured thing now. Sometime ago a fairly gilded syndicate came to him, proffering him for the use of his name, a proposal which he turned down with emphasis. The offer has now come in a different form, and the syndicate has offered him the opportunity of coming in on the ground floor as general high priest of the show. So, while the stadium is being rebuilt, McIntosh will hie him away and go into details of the matter, and, in all human probability, emerge as the world's best fight promoter, and have special prayer meetings held on his behalf."

EXETER BATTLES ANDOVER TODAY

Andover and Exeter, bitter rivals in all branches of sport, clash today in their annual diamond battle at Andover. Exeter is the favorite, but Andover can be counted upon to give Exeter a hard battle.

Exeter has made the better showing this season. The team is well supplied with good hitters and has several pitchers who should be able to defeat Andover. The fielding of the team has been of the best sort.

Coach Carney will probably pick Taylor to do the twirling, and with him in the box the boys feel confident of winning. Taylor was the second string pitcher last season. He has had a lot of experience, and has proved himself worthy.

Bru Neal or Jimmy Fox will play first base, Perkins will handle things at second, Charles Dickerman, the former Somerville High star, will play shortstop, and Shea will take care of third. All of these men have been performing in fine style this season and should play slashing ball this afternoon. Dickerman has been putting up a splendid game at short this year. He has been accepting everything coming his way and pegs over to first in big league fashion.

The outfield, with Frank Fripp, Winston and Kelliher, has been putting up a fielding game. All are fairly reliable hitters and good fielders. Winton has been hitting the ball at a good clip this season.

Exeter will be without the services of Captain Vaughn. Vaughn was injured in the game against Haverhill High. Exeter has won nine games this season and has lost one.

Andover has shown much improvement in the last few games, and the followers of the Moosehorsers from profit a hard battle. Swett or Sharp will do the mound duty, and both should be able to give a good account of themselves.

Both have been pitching fairly good ball this year. Wiley will do the backstopping.

Mary Murphy, Middlebrook, Tesch and Dougherty will play in the infield, while Wells, Souther and Captain Mahan will play the outfield positions.

Medford High gets its last chance today to win its fourth Suburban League championship. Medford battles Beverly High this afternoon at Medford and a win for the home boys will make it a tie for the title.

Medford has been playing better ball than Everett in its last few games and many pick them as the winners. Joe Pavey will do the twirling for Medford, and he will work his hardest to pull out a win. Captain Farley, Braddish, Frazier, Lawless, Twombly and Condon are all playing their best ball at present, and will fight to a finish this afternoon.

Jack Murray will be the hope of Everett on the mound. Murray has lost his last two games, and unless he clinches up this afternoon he may be defeated again. Everett has a bunch of hard hitters and speedy base runners.

Malden clashes with Melrose in a Suburban League game at Malden and should be returned the winner. Malden has shown much improvement in its last few games. Doyle will oppose him on the mound. Both teams will fight hard for the game, as they want to better their percentage in the final league standing.

Boston English High and Dorchester clash this afternoon at the Dunbar Avenue Grounds, Dorchester. This should be a good, close game. Boston College High will take its second crack at the St. John's Prep team at Danvers, and the Boston boys will work hard to duplicate their performance of the last meeting. Powder Point and Quincy Academy play at Auburndale. Mechanic Arts will meet the Natick High team at Natick. Beverly and Haverhill, old rivals, clash at Beverly. Arlington plays Reading, and Winchendon plays Stoneham in league games, and several other contests are on the schedule.

YALE OARSMEN IN 2-MILE ROW

GALES FERRY, Ct., June 8.—The Yale varsity crew had a hard two-mile row yesterday, traveling most of the way at a high stroke.

Neither Captain Romeyn nor Mr. Cook would give out the time, but the half and first mile were caught from shore and showed the boat was traveling at a fair clip and Harvard's big crews are not unevenly matched in speed at the present stage of the game.

The second varsity, however, did row to the drawbridge, and Coach Rodgers acknowledged this eight did cover the course in twenty-two minutes. As the second crew is conceded not so fast as the first, it is figured out in the camps that Yale and Harvard's big crews are not unevenly matched in speed at the present stage of the game.

PACKEY M'FARLAND GOES ABROAD SOON

MUSKEGON, Mich., June 8.—Packey McFarland of Chicago said before returning home today that he would sail for Europe on June 15 for several bouts abroad. He appeared to be in excellent condition after defeating Jack Brennan.

O'Rourke to Manage Langford and Flynn

Sam Langford and "Porky" Flynn will return to this country early this Summer. When they arrive in 'Frisco, they will be met by Tom O'Rourke, the veteran New York fight promoter and manager, who will manage them until Joe Woodman returns from the land of the kangaroos. Woodman has been detained in Australia by a lawsuit, and will be unable to start for this country until early in the Fall.

Woodman believes that it would be best for his two battlers to be in this country. This was what caused him to decide to ship them to O'Rourke.

Notes of the Links

It looks at present that as though Francis Ouimet of Woodland was assured of a prize in every tourney he enters in. He was low scorer at Wollaston, Woodland and Allston, in addition to taking the principal cup at the Country Club in their classic three day meeting.

J. H. Sullivan, the runner-up in the interscholastic championship last year, has been doing some splendid scoring in competitions and practice matches at Commonwealth. One of his recent rounds netted him a score of 71, which is very creditable for a lad still in his teens.

HARVARD CREW HAS FAST TRIAL

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 8.—The Harvard varsity eight went over the full course again late yesterday afternoon and showed up in fine style. The freshman eight did not pace the varsity on this occasion as on the first trial.

After the crew had rowed under the railroad bridge below the finish mark they were taken aboard the launch.

The oarsmen appeared to be in excellent condition after their long pull.

Captain Strong gave out the time of this evening's row as 21m. 22s.

The freshman eight, according to Coach Benn, is now settled upon. Fuller and Captain Trumbull going back in the boat this afternoon.

The varsity four had a narrow escape yesterday. On the return to the float nearly a hundred feet distant, the thin covering on the bow of the shell split and water poured into the craft so rapidly the boat sank before a landing could be made. All the crew are good swimmers and they treated the incident as a good joke.

Harvard's varsity eight had a brush with Yale's freshman eight for a half mile yesterday on the way up stream. The New Haven freshies could not hold the pace and were soon left behind, the Crimson oarsmen when the impromptu scrap ended.

Jean Dubuc's Puzzling Slow Ball

Red Sox Find It Hard to Wallop

JEAN DUBUC has the best slow ball in the American League, in the opinion of Billy Evans. The umpire goes even further than that. He says Dubuc has the best slow ball he ever looked at and Evans can get about as close an observation of pitched balls as any man alive.

Dubuc beat the Red Sox yesterday. They had the same difficulty in hitting the slow ball that other clubs have experienced this year.

There is no curve or freak delivery that proves as tantalizing to a batsman as Dubuc's slow ball. Delivered with identically the same motion that is used in sending up the fast ball, the batter, set for a fast one, generally takes a healthy wallop and consequently completes his swing before the ball crosses the plate.

Dubuc has a perfect delivery, one that totally deceives the batsman. It is possible to outguess what the majority of pitchers intend to deliver by the way they grip the ball or the motion they go through in delivering it. Their success must depend on the speed or curve they give the ball. With Dubuc it is the start that counts.

In conflict there are few better pitchers than the crafty French-Canadian. The fine points of pitching, and Dubuc has a neat collection of so-called "fine points," were taught him by the master himself, Clark Griffith, when he was manager of the Cincinnati club. Dubuc brought to Cincinnati a fast ball and Griffith taught him how to use them. It took time to learn, but after he wrapped the slow and fast ball into that neat delivery, Dubuc became dangerous. Without this ability to change his pace and keep the batter ignorant of what he is doing, Dubuc would not be a good pitcher. A slow ball is consistently effective only when it can be used the way Dubuc uses his.

THE Giants have won 32-39 of their games and if they keep on at the rate they will win 126 games, beating the record made by the Cubs by ten games. It is asking a good deal of any ball team, no matter how strong—of any weak opponents—to keep on at the clip the Giants have been maintaining; and to surpass the record of 1910 victories is the stiffest sort of a task. It isn't so much that other teams are likely to interfere by their own improvement as that a team must be able to keep up a streak of keeping on the edge all the time to keep from slumping. There's the wear and tear of constant winning and the high pressure that goes with it to be withstood. Just how strong has been the Giants' playing may be appreciated better by noting that they have won the equivalent of five-sixths of every series; that is, their averages of victories for each of the twelve series they have completed is 10-12. A driving pace like that is one that don't appear to be playing under forced draught.

FRED CLARKE has another kick to make to President Lynch when he arrives in New York. The umpires have a habit of chasing Mike Donlin from the bench or coaching lines. In a recent game Umpire Rush heard some chattering from the bench boys and singling out the one he ordered him to go to the clubhouse. As it happened, it was Behg and not Donlin who did the talking. Behg refused to go and had to go and stopped the game until he went. The consequence did not seem so serious at the time, but when Clarke needed a fourth hitter in the ninth inning, Donlin was missed. As it was, Clarke had to use Bill Kelly.

JOE McGINNITY, the Iron Man, now runs the Newark club. In very good to his folks, so they all declare. Most of his family work at the Newark ball park. They say here that one brother is assistant manager, another is secretary, a nephew is on the main gate, several first cousins are ushers and park policemen, Joe's second cousins help the groundkeepers, and one lad, no claims to a distant relative, has been given a job manicuring the street in front of the ball park.

THE Reds are somewhat puzzled and excited over the newest pitcher, Gilliam. Henry O'Day, who wanted a lefthander, was under the impression that he was negotiating for Gilliam, a lefthanded semi-pro. A few nights ago, however, Charles G. Gilliam, a gigantic righthander, six feet, four, and with the confidence of a curly wolf, blew in and explained that he was the Gilliam who had received the telegrams and accepted the terms. The towering Mr. Gilliam modestly says that, while there is a good lefthander named Gilliam or Gilliam, he, Charles G. Gilliam, is the big noise as a pitcher, and that he is the man whom Fogel and Poulin tried so hard to sign. The giant righthander is a cool, nervy fellow, good-looking and intelligent. Home town, Wayland, W. Va. Home town of the lefthanded Gilliam is supposed to be Columbus, O.

"We have plenty of righthanded pitchers now," said O'Day, "but if this fellow is really good we will gladly keep him. He looks all right, anyhow, but when I see for him I supposed he was a southpaw."

"I haven't pitched for the Reds yet," laughed the huge Mr. Gilliam, "but I feel strong and eager to toil. Sorry I disappointed Mr. O'Day, since he expected a lefthander, but I'll do the best I know how."

IN a recent game in Brooklyn, with two Reds on and none out, Benton bunted. Daubert, playing far in, got the ball and clouted to third—getting nobody. This double first baseman thing a bunt to third—is called "the sacrifice killer," and is said to have been invented by Hal Chase. It is a pretty play, with only one fault; it never catches anybody. Once, it did, some years ago, a team played with a lame leg fell down going from second to third, and they got him, but never since has anybody been nailed in that particular manner. They still keep trying it on, however, for it is a very exciting play, and always causes much shouting among the spectators.

Baseball Notes

When the Springfield (Mass.) club of the Connecticut League goes to New Haven to play a series they call it a southern trip.

"Rube" Vickers has been fined $25 and suspended for five days for a row with an umpire. Baltimore needs "Rube" at this time.

Bill Carey, part owner of the Springfield club, says a manager of one of the clubs in the Palmer League came to him in search of a pitcher. "What kind of pitcher with your present pitchers?" asked Mr. Hinsel. "Why, one every game this season for you?" "Yes," replied the manager, "but last week he won by only one run."

The Washingtons just now are the speed boys of the American League.

President Mcgaw of the Red Sox considers Joe Birmingham one of the greatest outfielders in the land. While he may not be the best on pickups or bat, the Cleveland gardener makes amends for anything he may be shy in either work by sensational fielding and wonderful throwing.

The Naps have a young collegian who will soon get a trial. His name is Chester L. Miller. He received his higher education at Wittenberg College, Springfield, O. In five games he fanned nine, two men, an average of more than eighteen a game.

President Comiskey has decided to "wet" the city championship pennant won from the Cubs last Fall next Thursday night. All the usual trimmings of a flag-raising day will be provided. Boston will be the rest of the season, and there will be something doing, as nothing but Sox, Whites and Red is heard among the Chicago fans.

Pat Maloney, the outfielder from Brockton, has been in with the grip, wired Manager Wolverton that he will report to the Highlanders in Chicago Tuesday. No orders of this kind for the Yankees forward to with great interest, it being said that he shows earmarks of a pitcher.

The dismal failure of the United States League is taken to mean that it will be long before another outlaw movement is attempted. The promoters of the United States League were not hampered in any way by organized ball. They were let severely alone to lose their roll. So orders of the major leagues can keep their players from jumping there is no chance for real opposition.

Whether the Washingtons paid $5,000 or 5 cents for Gandil, he has earned it if he has had anything to do with their general spurt.

There are so many Browns pitching this year that a directory could be issued. They are pitching for clubs in pairs. Yale as well as St. Louis has a C. Brown and an E. Brown.

Looks very much as if the American League race this year would be one of the best in the history of the organization. And you know what that means, for there certainly have been some corkers in the past. With the season almost a third gone to time and with some of the teams almost one-third through their schedules, there are six teams within striking distance.

The Highlanders and the Browns are the only ones so far back that they can be considered in the field of trailers, and every day brings a tightening of the race. For the teams in front are not playing the baseball that they did, with the result that the fellows who were trailing just a few days ago are rapidly forging near.

Just a few days ago and the White Sox and the Red Sox were far ahead of their rivals. And today—

A week ago and the Naps were supposed to be far down in the pennant race and today they are right with the world's champions.

Take them and a win for the Athletics and a loss for the Naps would give the Mackmen a lead again. But it merely demonstrates the closeness of this race.

Those six teams are practically bunched. Chicago, in first place, is leading the Nationals in size, as games go. To-day would be a pretty fair lead if the season were three-quarters instead of a trifle less than a third over. In the early part of June that isn't what you could call a wide margin, and it will be many a day before the dopesters begin to figure

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

Married Life the Third Year

NO. 47—THE GRIFFENS ENJOY THE DINNER, BUT DO NOT APPRECIATE THE CAVIAR

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"EVERYTHING all right?" called out Warren, as he threw down some packages and shrugged out of his overcoat.

Helen hurried in from the dining room. "Oh, I was afraid you were going to be late. Did you bring the caviar and the almonds?"

"Here they are. You'd better fix the caviar right away, and put it on ice."

Helen took the packages and hurried back to the kitchen. Warren followed her to the door.

"What's that odor through here?" sniffing the air disapprovingly.

"Oh, dear, I just burnt some incense. I was afraid there might be some odor of the cooking."

"Well, I'd a darn sight rather smell cooking than that stuff," throwing up a window. "Smells like a Chinese joint." Then drawing out his watch and comparing it with the dining room clock. "That's still five minutes slow. You'd better be getting dressed."

"But there are a few things yet I MUST do!" And for the next few moments Helen was rushing back and forth, giving final directions to Delia and putting the finishing touches to the table and sideboard.

From the bathroom came the sound of running water, and of Warren's cheerful whistle as he prepared for his bath. Evidently he was in a very good humor, and Helen devoutly hoped he would remain so. She herself was thoroughly tired and unstrung from the two days' anxious preparation for the dinner. And in spite of her careful planning that nothing should be left for the last moment, she found that many things were still to be done. It was a quarter after six now, and the dinner was at seven. They would probably come a few minutes before—which gave her only a little more than half an hour.

When Helen was much hurried she always grew confused, and now she fluttered around from one place to another, accomplishing much less than at any other time.

Getting Dressed

"Now, Delia, I MUST dress—it's twenty minutes after! Do you know about everything? Now, don't forget to serve the artichoke on these plates."

"You go on, ma'am. They'll be here before you're dressed."

In her own room, quickly she slipped into the little pale blue crepe de chine gown.

"Warren, can you hook me up?" going to the door of his room. "Delia's so busy."

Warren, already dressed, was transferring his watch and cigars from the pocket of the suit he had just taken off to his dinner coat.

"All right, turn around," as he drew her toward the light.

"Oh, no dear; you're hooking the outside! The lining must be fastened first."

"Jove! There's a double set of 'em, Wan. How do go expect me to do this if you wiggle?"

"But, dear, DO hurry! It's already struck half-past."

"Talk about inventions of the devil! Here, where does this one go?"

Helen fell back hopelessly. He took her finger and put it over the hook. "There, that fellow—what do you do with him?"

"That goes under the belt. Isn't there a loop for it?"

"Not that I can see."

"Oh," desperately. "They'll be here in a moment. I'll have to get Delia after all!" And she flew out to the kitchen, where Delia was on her knees trying to relight the stove, which had a habit of going out at the most inconvenient times. Gallantly Delia washed her hands and hooked up the dress, for to be interrupted in the preparation of a dinner at such a critical moment is not conducive to amiability.

Just then the bell rang. Helen broke away from Delia with the last hook still unfastened.

"Oh!" excitedly, as she rushed in to Warren. "There they are now! And I'm not ready! I must fix my hair! Can't you receive them?"

"Of course I can't!" in an angry whisper. "How would that look? Your hair's all right!"

Not at Her Best

And Helen had no choice but to receive them as she was, wretchedly conscious that her hair needed a few last touches and that the powder she had hurriedly dusted over her neck and arms had not been wiped off.

While Warren helped Mr. Griffen out of his coat in the hall, Helen took Mrs. Griffen into her room. As she laid aside her wraps Helen was dismayed to find that she was not in an evening gown, but wore a black dress with a high-necked lace yoke.

As the hostess, Helen realized that she should not have dressed more than her guest. But it had never occurred to her that the wife of a Western millionaire would not wear an evening gown when she dined out. Perhaps Mr. Griffen was not dressed either! Oh, why had Warren not thought of such a possibility?

But when they joined the men she was relieved to find that Mr. Griffen was dressed. He was a big, powerful man, with all the force that is supposed to characterize a self-made Westerner. Helen had met his only once before, but she now thought he looked even more impressive in his evening clothes.

She was fervently glad when almost immediately Delia announced that dinner was served, for it broke up that awkward interval before the dinner when the conversation is always strained.

Helen Is Proud

Whatever her nervousness as to the dinner itself, of the table Helen was serenely proud. The only light was from the pink shade table candles which shone on the glistening cut glass and silver and left the rest of the room in a pleasant, restful dimness.

"That's a good cocktail," remarked Mr. Griffen with conviction, as he drained his glass. "That your mixture, Curtis?"

"No, I have that mixed at the club. They do it better there."

Helen was hoping anxiously for some favorable comment on the fresh caviar, which was served on dainty squares of toast. She had laughed them saying, "Fresh caviar! This is quite a treat."

But to her chagrin Mr. Griffen ate his caviar with the greatest unconcern, and Mrs. Griffen, after nibbling at it politely, left hers untouched. Could it be that they did not KNOW it was FRESH caviar?

To go to all that trouble to get FRESH caviar at $12 a pound—when the canned would have done just as well!

Even though the caviar was not appreciated, it was plain that Mr. Griffen was enjoying the dinner. And if Helen had felt any uneasiness as to what they would talk about, or as to whether the Western millionaire would be hard to entertain, it was soon dispelled.

For Mr. Griffen dominated the conversation. The others had only to listen. And Helen began to see why this plain man was such a force in business. Everything he said carried with it a certain ringing conviction. There was concentrated energy in his every gesture.

And as she looked across the table at Mrs. Griffen, who seemed more than ever subdued and colorless beside her husband, Helen realized the hopelessness of her ever "keeping up" with him. She had already far outgrown her wife as evident, and that his progressive, energetic life would make the breach further was inevitable.

Just before they left Mr. Griffen said to Helen heartily: "I should like to take you over our ranch, Mrs. Curtis. We have a great country out there." And he went on to tell her of the ranch and its resources.

"I'm on here now organizing a company. If my plans go through, your husband will have an interest. So he may have to come out West again very soon—and the next time we'll see that he brings you with him."

Helen averted her face to keep him from seeing the flush of joy. Warren was talking to Mrs. Griffen—she wondered if he had heard! For the rest of the evening she was athrill with thoughts of all the possibilities the future might hold.

When finally they had gone, she ran to Warren, drew his head down and kissed him excitedly.

Everything Fine

"Oh, Warren, didn't everything go off beautifully?"

"First rate," complacently lighting a cigar. "They enjoyed it, too. But they didn't know that caviar was fresh. Did you notice that?"

"Oh, but that's such a little thing! Did you hear what Mr. Griffen said to me? How he spoke of the company and of your interest in it?"

"Yes, I heard. I told you if he put this through it would be a mighty big thing for me—and it will."

"And you think the dinner helped?" eagerly. "You think they really did enjoy it?"

"Of course they did," a little impatiently. "Didn't I just say so?" Then, with a yawn, "Do you know what time it is?" taking his watch out to wind it. "It's almost twelve. If I've got to help you out of that dress, turn around—I want to get to bed."

Helen meekly backed up to the light. But she hardly heard his grumbling complaints at the hooks, for her thoughts were on the dinner. Everything had "gone right." And she was filled with that sense of relief that only a hostess who has anguished over the success of a dinner can know.

The Latest Dances and How to Dance Them

A Summer Ballroom Favorite—"The Flying Two-Step"

HERE is a dance that is rapidly becoming the rage in all the Summer dance halls.

Anybody who can dance the two-step can easily learn the advanced steps told of in this article.

It includes all of the novelty movements contained in the bunny hug, but is strictly a hot weather dance, as but few of the steps require any increased exertion.

The girl who is graceful can become an expert in the "flying two-step" without difficulty, if she has a good dancer for a partner.

(Specially posed by Jack Clifford and Irene Weston of "The Winsome Widow" Company.

The small picture at the top shows a body clasp in the dance assumed during regular two-step movements; the centre picture the position taken immediately before performing a "flying circle," and the bottom picture the dancers at arm's length at the finish of the whirl.

By IRENE WESTON

THIS two-step is the most popular dance in America.

If you don't believe me ask the orchestra leader or the bandmaster or the pianist who plays for parties, balls and dances.

But to dance the two-step the same way all the time gets tiresome, and that is why so many new steps have come up and why the new dances have had such a vogue in ball rooms as well as on the stage.

Of the many variations on this popular dance, the one illustrated here, the flying two-step, is perhaps the prettiest. At all events it isn't very difficult, and if one limbers up enough beforehand and is used to dancing there is no reason why any fairly good dancer can't get through it with credit.

Take a good two-step time—any of them, now or old, lend themselves perfectly for this dance—and begin with a moderately slow dance in the ordinary way.

How to Begin

The partners should be facing each other, of course, but holding to each other loosely, with enough space between to allow of the next step. Here you go on with the same two-step, but throw the foot in the air between each step, giving it a vigorous kick. Now, continuing this kicking, dip down as you raise the foot.

Both partners should face the same way, as it is almost impossible to dance this step in the regular dancing position.

Facing forward once more, the man slips his arm around the back of the girl's waist, takes her left hand and clasps her right hand in his right, holding it about as high as his chest. They two-step up and down the hall in a sort of chassez very much like a galiop.

Suddenly letting go of her right hand, the man clasps her left hand tightly. She dances away from him to arm's length. With a sudden jerk on the first beat of the bar, he draws her toward him and she dances around in small circles until his arm is circling her waist again and they are once more in the ordinary position for the two-step.

This circling can only be done with practice, but it is very effective and has its proper place in the ball room. On the stage, of course, one gets startling effects by circling as fast as possible, winding and unwinding with incredible rapidity, so that the girl looks like one of those balls in the cup and ball game. You don't have to do it so fast, however, as long as you keep in perfect time and rhythm. With a little practice you can make a good many variations on the old fashioned two-step. One of these is the position illustrated here where the man stands just a little behind his partner.

Very Pretty Movements

By reversing the step, dancing to the side and then forward and back, all kinds of pretty figures can be evolved, and this flying two-step makes a very pretty simple cotillon feature. Each couple should dance around the ball once, a prize going to the best dancers, or those whose steps were most original.

One figure in the flying two-step occurs after the partners have gone back to the original dancing position. Suddenly the man deserts his partner, dancing away from her to a distance of about ten feet. He continues dancing, but without moving away from the spot, while she begins to circle around and around, always in step to the music, until she lands back in her partner's arms. This is a very pretty figure, and shows off the grace and agility of both dancers to best advantage.

To dance these figures one must be very light on the feet and one cannot afford to be awkward for a second. I think that the more our boys and girls learn of graceful dancing the more easy they will be in manner and deportment. So many pretty girls are awkward and ill-at-ease way to overcome this is to study some of the modern dances. Everybody knows how to two-step. The flying two-step I have described is a variation of that dance which anyone who is interested can learn. I have omitted the hard steps and acrobatic feats, which are only fitted for the stage.

Dancing, among other excellencies, has the merit that it is movement from which all haltingness and accidental wavering must be excluded. Each motion must be definite and clean cut. Once a dancer begins to shake or "wobble" grace departs and so does the confidence of the onlookers.

A Valuable Hint.

I don't know how you feel about it, but in warm weather the pressure of the hands is most uncomfortable, so my partner and I manage to hold to each other without the pressure of hot and sticky fingers, the cumation of all good white gloves. When we are doing the ordinary two-step I have my arm on Mr. Clifford's shoulder and his arm is around my waist, but we keep our hands free except when it's absolutely necessary as in circling of the flying forward a step.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

An unprepared man went to address a Sunday school. Thinking to be funny, he asked this question:

"What would you do before so many bright boys and girls, who expected a speech from you, if you had nothing to say?"

"I'd keep quiet," replied a small boy.

"Why did you leave that swell boarding house?"

"Because the swellness was at the expense of the food supply."

"What do you mean?"

"Four kinds of forks and two kinds of vegetables."

"What makes you think the baby is going to be a great politician?" asked the young mother, anxiously.

"I'll tell you," answered the young father, confidently. "He can say more things that sound well and mean nothing than any kid I ever saw."

"What started the riot at the performance of 'Hamlet' last night?"

"Why, Hamlet held the skull and said: 'Alas! poor Yorick. You are not the only deadhead in the house.'"

Magistrate—What! Do you mean to say your husband struck you, and he a physical wreck?

Mrs. Maloney—Yes, yer honor; but he's been a physical wreck only since he struck me.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

THE RESOURCEFULNESS OF DAYSEY MAYME

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

A BOY is of no use to any one in the world but his parents, and he is only of some use to them because of the hopes he represents.

At least this is the opinion of Daysey Mayme Appleton, and she has a brother, and knows.

But recently she discovered a use for a good, live boy which she recommends to all households that know the annoying pinch of limited means.

The supply of chinaware in the Appleton home was getting diminished. Pitchers looked as if they had been unduly inquisitive and had been smashed in the nose; cups and saucers bore signs of a fight and plates were so outlined with cracks that one could shift his potatoes and study the map of Europe, and move his meat and pick out a map of Mexico.

"We can't afford to buy a new set," said Daysey Mayme, "but we will have one, nevertheless."

So she urged a wealthy cousin to visit them and be sure to bring her Angel Child, a boy of ten. They came. Daysey Mayme gave the Angel Child a bean bag and a football, and encouraged him to play in the house, having first taken pains to put the cracked china where it would be a target.

He broke it all! When Mrs. Appleton wept over the loss of her china, "some pieces had been heirlooms in the family for years, you know," the cousin generously bought her a dozen new plates and took her Angel Child home.

"That is good so far," said Daysey Mayme, "but it is not enough. You and father must celebrate your china wedding."

"But we have been married forty years," gasped her mother. "Why YOU are past thirty."

"They don't know I am in this town," said Daysey Mayme. "But if any suspect it I will dress in a way to allay their suspicions."

So the invitations were issued, and when the guests arrived each equipped with a pickle dish, a soup tureen or a gravy bowl, they were met at the door by an old-looking creature.

True, she looked to be past thirty, but plainly she wasn't, for she wore skirts that didn't reach her shoe tops, and her hair hung in a braid down her back.

She kept a finger in her mouth, and looked at the guests shyly. And at the table she behaved most terribly, screaming for more ice cream, and kicking when she didn't get it.

"My little daughter," explained Mrs. Appleton, "isn't used to such late hours."

The Manicure Lady

"I SEE there is a move on foot to start filtering the water that comes through our city and into our homes, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Goodness knows it is about time, because the water we've been using is something fierce of late. I had some of it the other morning just before I got ready to come down to the shop, and it was that muddy I could hardly drink it. It reminded me of the good old days out in St. Louis when I was there during the World's Fair in 1904. Was you ever in St. Louis, George?"

"I was there once," said the Head Barber, but without any enthusiasm in his voice. "I had left Chicago to go to New Orleans, and I happened to run into some fellows on the train that was going to St. Louis. None of us hit the feathers in our berths that night, and the natural result was that when I woke up I was in a hotel in St. Louis. Them Indians had kind of shanghaied me, you might say, and I didn't get away from them until I was broke. Then they got me a new ticket and stowed me, and I was on my way to New Orleans at last. But that ain't no sign that I ever noticed the condition of the water in St. Louis. As far as I can remember I didn't use any of it for anything but showers."

"You and the old gent would make a great team," said the Manicure Lady. "Father is all the time saying that water is only good to stand under in the morning, so he naturally doesn't care for a little cloudy tint in the water up home, but he ought to bear in mind that there is a lot of other people in the world that really likes water for its own true worth, which means drink. I don't think that Providence ever made water not to drink, do you, George?"

"I s'pose a little of it goes good when you can't get anything else," said the Head Barber. "I had two drinks of it this morning. I didn't notice that it tasted so bad. I don't see why they don't stop kicking in this town about the water service, and the Sunday service, and other kinds of service that is a lot better service than the kickers ever got when they was back on the farm."

"Well, I don't care whether you noticed or didn't notice anything wrong with the city water," said the Manicure Lady. "As for me, I know that it is unhealthy, and you couldn't make me believe nothing else if you stood there talking out of one corner of your mouth all day long. Folks like you, George, that was never students of eugenics, sure don't have the faintest idea of how to keep healthy."

"What is 'eugenics,' kiddo?" asked the Head Barber.

"It is the habit of observing the laws of eugene," replied the Manicure Lady. "It means that unless you know the laws of health and sanitarium conditions, you are likely to go to the hospital and maybe get no return ticket."

"You must mean 'hygiene,' not 'eugene,'" corrected the Head Barber, beaming face showed that we had won an argument and knew it.

"I guess I don't talk no more as to this afternoon," said the Manicure. I ain't "You are too thick."

"Maybe so," admitted the Head Barber "but every time I see you in one of the high duck suits it seems to me that you ain't very thin yourself."

Nothing Like System

"DON'T tell me you can't remember things!" murmured Jobbs to Dobbs. "Memory is all a matter of system. Now, in what year was the Battle of Agincourt fought?"

Dobbs pleaded that his memory failed him on that interesting historical fact.

"Exactly!" replied Jobbs. "Now, how many days are there in a week?"

"Seven," came the answer.

"Very well. Twice seven are fourteen. Multiply by a hundred—fourteen hundred. Number of days in June, thirty. Half of thirty, fifteen. Fifteen and fourteen hundred?"

"Fourteen hundred and fifteen," hazarded Jobbs.

"Right! That's the year of the battle. System, my boy. That's what does it—system!"

A Girl's First Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I AM engaged to be married," writes "Troubled One," "and love the man very dearly. A number of years ago I was engaged to another man and we quarreled. I also loved him, and now my friends twit me about it. They say I am fickle, and that I should tell my fiance all about it. What shall I do? Is it my disgrace to have been in love more than once? I mean seriously."

Bless your heart, child, did you ever wonder where all of us would be if our mothers and fathers had married their first loves?

No one marries a first love outside of the story books. If men married their first loves, every man would marry his first school teacher, and if women held to the first love, or none, a woman would marry the man who called on her aunt or older sister when she was a child, and held her on his knee, and said he was waiting for her.

Those love affairs were serious, because of a growth of Intelligence and discrimination. I do not advocate promiscuous love affairs, but if a woman loves a man honestly and honorably, and for some reason nothing but sorrow comes of it, there is nothing to her discredit and much to her credit. She has shown, at least, that she is human, that she has a heart, and if she is a sensible girl she emerges from a painful experience with a wider charity, a greater tenderness for other girls, and a keener, clearer outlook so far as man is concerned.

I beg of you not to even dream of telling your sweetheart of any previous love affair. A man has a way of presuming that he has a right to a love-checkered past, but that when he marries he must be the first love of the girl he makes his wife. He goes through an orchard brushing the bloom off any peach that pleases him, and demands that the peach he finally selects as his own be intact.

He doesn't know that he is the most unlust creature in the world, and many a nice little girl has confided to her husband that away back there years ago she loved another man, and has found later that she put a club in his hands.

The most jealous creature living is MAN, and the man to whom you are engaged has more or less of that failing, though your acquaintance may so far have failed to develop it.

You are concerned in his present and his future, and he is concerned in yours. If you are the dear, sensible girl I take you to be, you will not go digging up his past that you may have a skeleton or two to frighten away your happiness, and neither will you point out a grave in your past and bend him a shovel.

Believe me, I am concerned in your happiness, as I am concerned in the happiness of all my dear girls. Don't jeopardize that happiness by any distorted notions of what constitutes confidence and loyalty.

A Mysterious Disappearance

One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written

By Gordon Holmes

BEGIN TODAY BY READING THIS FIRST

LADY ALICE DYKE, wife of Sir Charles Dyke, disappears from her London home. She is traced to Richmond by Claude Bruce, a barrister, and friend of Sir Charles. The body of a murdered woman is found jammed in a drain pipe at Putney. Inspector White, of Scotland Yard, finds that some of the underclothing on the body belonged to Lady Dyke. The body, however, is not identified. Soon after, Jane Harding, Lady Dyke's maid, also disappears. Bruce searches Richmond for a clew and centers his attention on Raleigh Mansions, a fashionable apartment house. He ventures to ask on Mrs. Gwendolen Hillmer, one of the tenants, who, he learns, is acquainted with Sydney H. Corbett, a former tenant, and who disappeared at the time of the mystery. Mrs. Hillmer admits that Corbett is her brother, and because of an unfortunate business deal with Dodge & Co., brokers, was forced to go to the south of France. She refuses to tell Corbett's real name. She and Bruce go to the theatre. He recognizes one of the chorus girls as the missing maid. After the play Bruce manages to meet the girl. He endeavors to question her, but she is defiant. Bruce then visits Mr. Dodge of Dodge & Co. Dodge declares he has never heard of Corbett, Mrs. Hillmer's missing brother. Bruce becomes interested in a missing deal and obtains a list of names of its promoters. Questioned, Dodge knowns nothing of Corbett, he leaves to call on Sir Charles. Sir Charles is not in, but the butler tells Bruce that Jane Harding, the maid, called and seemed upset to find the barrister out. Bruce is mystified by this, but decides to go to Monte Carlo in search of Corbett. At the Hotel du Cercle he finds letters awaiting Corbett, but nobody seems to know anything about the man. He visits the casino and then goes for a stroll in the gardens.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode.

A PIGEON-SHOOTING match was in progress; and, as Bruce fell in with a friend who took a prominent part in local life, the two entered the club grounds to watch the contest.

At the moment a Londoner, named up young Englishman was shooting off a tle with a Russian Count. A very pretty girl, with a delicate and refined beauty enhanced by a pleasant expression, was taking a most unfeminine interest in the slaughter of the pigeons by the Englishman.

Her eyes spoke her thoughts. It was as if they said: "I do not want the birds to be killed, but I want a certain person to win."

BRUCE GETS A CLEW TO THE MAN OF MYSTERY

The clerk came toward him triumphantly holding up a letter.
(Posed by William P. Carleton of "The Wall Street Girl" Company.)

Nine birds each had been grassed, and the Russian was growing impatient. The Englishman was cool, his fair backer keenly excited. The Count fired and missed his tenth. Up rose the Englishman's bird, and the girl could not restrain an impetuous "Now!"

Both Missed the Bird

So the Englishman missed also.

Amidst the buzz of comment which arose, Bruce said to his compaion: "What's going on?"

"This is the final tie in the International. It is a big prize, and each man has backed himself heavily. The two are Albert Mensmore and Count Plachkoff. The girl has taken all the nerve out of Mensmore. Bar accident, he is a goner."

The cynic was right. In the thirteenth round the Count alone scored and smiled largely in response to his antagonist's quiet congratulations. As for the girl, it was with difficulty she restrained her tears.

"I think that we have witnessed a tragedy," said Bruce's acquaintance as they walked off; and the barrister agreed with him. He was sorry for Mensmore and his pretty supporter. Mayhap the loss of the match meant a great deal to both of them.

That night he learned by chance that Mensmore lived at the Hotel du Cercle. He met him in the billiard room and tried to inveigle him into conversation. But the young fellow was too miserable to respond to his advances. Beyond a mere civil acknowledgement of some slight act of politeness, Bruce could not draw him out.

Next morning he saw Mensmore again. If the man looked haggard the previous evening his appearance now was positively startling, that is, to one of Bruce's powers of observation. Ninety-nine men out of a hundred would have seen that Mensmore had not slept well. Bruce was assured that, for some reason, the other's brain was dominated by some overwhelming idea, and one which might eventuate in a tragic manner were it to be allowed to go unchecked.

The Chance Comes

For some reason he took a good deal of interest in his unfortunate fellow-countryman, and determined to help him if the opportunity presented itself.

It came, with dramatic rapidity.

During the dinner he noticed that Mensmore was in such a state of mental disturbance that he ate and drank with the air of one who is feverishly wasting rather than replenishing his strength.

Soon after 8 o'clock, at the hour when frequenters of the Casino go there in order to secure a seat for the evening's play, Mensmore quitted the dining room. Bruce followed him unobtrusively, and was just in time to see him enter the lift.

The barrister waited in the hall, having first secured his hat and overcoat from the bureau, where he happened to leave them.

Even while he noted the descending lift, in which he could see Mensmore, who had donned a light covert coat, the breast of which bulged somewhat on the left side, the hotel clerk came to him, triumphantly holding a letter.

"And now, monsieur," cried the clerk, "we shall see what we shall see."

The missive was addressed to the mysterious Sydney H. Corbett, and had been forwarded by the Rlouse Square post office.

With a clang the door of the lift swung open and Mensmore hastened out. Bruce had to decide instantly between the chance of seeing Corbett with his own eyes and pursuing the fanciful errand he had mapped out in imagination with reference to the stranger who so interested him.

Keep a Lookout.

"Thank you," he said to the clerk, "I am going to the Casino for an hour; you will greatly oblige me by keeping a sharp lookout for anyone who claims the letter."

"Monsieur, it shall have my utmost regard."

The barrister had not erred in his surmise as to Mensmore's destination. The young man walked straight across the square and entered the grounds of the famous Casino.

Indoors, an excellent band was playing a selection from "The Geisha." The spacious foyer was fast filling with a fashionable throng, without, the silver radiance of the moon, lighting up gardens, rocks, buildings and sea, might well have added the last link to the pleasant boudoir that would keep an eye from the gambling saloon that night; but Mensmore heeded none of these things.

He passed the barrier, closely followed by Bruce, crossed the foyer and disappeared through the baize door that guard the magnificent room in which roulette is played.

Round several of the tables a fairly considerable crowd had gathered already. The more the merrier, is the rule of the Casino. There is something curiously fascinating for the gambler in the presence of others. It would seem to be an almost callolous thing for a man to stalk solemnly up to a deserted board and stake his money on the chances of the game merely for the edification of the officials in charge.

Bruce entered the room soon after Mensmore, and saw the latter elbowing his way to a seat about to be vacated by a stout Spanish lady, who had rapidly lost the sum she allowed herself to stake each day.

She was one of those numerous players who betake to the Casino a certain amount daily, and systematically stop playing when they have either lost their money or won a previously determined maximum.

To Be Continued Monday.

Settling His Account

THE bright little surgery at the rear of the doctor's house was occupied by two—the medical man and a patient, who was being attended to for the last time, seeing that he had got over his illness.

"Yes, yes," said the doctor, "you're all right now. You needn't come here again."

"But, sir," remarked the patient, "vat about der bill? I ain't got much money. Vill you take der bill out in trade?"

The assheones looked his man up and down.

"Well, I might do it," he replied. "What is your business?"

"I am der leader of der liddle German band sale. Ve vill play in front of your house every evening for von month."

But the doctor didn't think so.

Do You Know That—

Somebody has figured that an average man of 150 pounds contains the constituents found in 1,000 eggs. There is enough gas in him to fill a gasometer of 3,649 cubic feet. He contains enough iron to make four tenpenny nails. His fat would make twenty-five candles and a good sized cake of soap. His phosphate content would make 8,004 boxes of matches. There is enough hydrogen in him in combination to fill a balloon.

Several towns in Norway and Sweden have recently taken steps toward the general introduction of electric heating, to replace the use of stoves burning wood or coal. Few buildings in these places have central heating systems, and the tile stoves now generally used could easily be adapted to receive electric heaters. The electric currents will be supplied by the public plants, which are generally run by water power.

Stock Market Trading Is Dull; Prices Irregular

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, June 8.—The Boston market was quiet and somewhat irregular today. During the first hour P. Lorillard made a gain of 5 points and Liggett and Myers 2½. The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., today declared a regular semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. and an extra dividend of 2 per cent.

Trading Quiet in New York.

The New York market was quiet today and opened with slight changes in prices in most instances. Canadian Pacific was an exception, and scored an initial advance of a point. After many leading railroads and industrials suffered from a recession there was a rally. There was not much activity in coppers and bonds, and on the whole showed a dearth of speculative interest.

Prices on the curb had a steady tone. The London market was not helpful to New York. American railway shares were uncertain and price irregularity was characteristic of the list. Canadian Pacific was strongest there.

Copper Metal Market Strong.

The copper metal market remains of necessity strong with sprint stocks amounting to only 49,615,641 pounds at the beginning of this month. After the Copper Producers Association made its statement yesterday it was stated that the price of copper was standing firm for 17½ cents a pound for the year, and one of the largest users of this metal made sales above that figure. Within a year sales of stocks in the open market have increased more than 110,000,000 pounds. The decrease in the copper supply has also been unusually large.

One tier of the report published today was from the consumers' side of the market, and from some disposition to discount the figures has been noted. It has been pointed out that the 5 per cent. increase in consumption before labor troubles in May and June expect more output and thereby increased stocks. Production must keep 50,000 pounds in the thirty-one day month that the consumption has been in the twenty-eight days, 1,785,714 pounds a day. Domestic deliveries were 372,000,000 pounds against 69,333,346 pounds in the month, exports increased from 33,332,426 to 39,833,334 pounds.

Thompson, Towle & Co. say that Mage-point copper is just beginning to be reflected in the earnings of big copper mining companies and that earnings of big copper mining companies and that what they can earn with copper at 17 cents.

Financial News in Brief.

Union Pacific, it is understood, has taken through the bankers who underwrote the issue, the $20,000,000 of Oregon Short Line bonds. The latter 6 per cent. five-year issue matures in 1916. The proceeds will be used for improvements. The total assets of the Oregon Short Line of the Union Pacific were not considered good and the Union Pacific has not endorsed the issue. The Short Line's net earnings for the year ended June 30 last were $15,000,000 and the interest charges $3,000,000. The Union Pacific has a holding of $11,000,000 of the Oregon Short Line common stock.

It is believed in Baltimore that the recent sale of the Seaboard Air Line has placed it in position to control the Atlantic Coast Line as connected Baltimore controlled the Seaboard Air Line with the Western Maryland to that end. It is planned by the latter road to build from Hagerstown, to Potomac near Cumberland, Md., where connection will be made with the Pittsburg & Lake Erie. It will require operations averaging after being closed down for lack of an adequate water supply, and the payment of the regular dividend will be declared July 1.

The directors of the Erie will take up the dividend question on June 19, and there is a strong sentiment in favor of the payment at the rate or more than 4 per cent. per annum. The last dividend was 1 per cent. quarterly.

It is said that the Northern Pacific contemplating for the current fiscal year will cross $90,000,000 which would be a gain of $4,000,000 over 1911. The road has 750,000,000 or a gain of more than 7 per cent. Compared with the last quarter of 1911 the road is expected to have from 30 to 35 per cent. increase in earnings this FY1 the last in hearing crops. There is some expectation that the directors may decide that the dividend requirements are reserved, first next week to increase the annual rate from 6 to 7 per cent. This road's earnings are now large and increasing and its business has been very good.

The Erie is going so far in June show a considerable increase of from 20 to 25 per cent.

The Boston News Bureau says that the directors of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. are due to meet in the latter part of this month or early in July to declare a dividend of 2½ per cent. on the stock, which is at the rate of $2,812,582 per annum. This dividend was declared in April, and at the rate of 50,000,000 a year, while the steel output was 31,000,000.

MINISTER ARRESTED ON DEATH CHARGE

NEW SWEDEN, Me., June 8.—On a charge of murder the Rev. Charles Emelius, Lutheran minister, was arrested here today. He is accused of having killed his father-in-law, Edgar Johnson, June 12, 1911. The local authorities pronounced Jacobson's death a case of suicide, but representatives of the Aetna-Standard Life Co. maintained he had been murdered.

HILL OUT AS HEAD OF GREAT NORTHERN

TACOMA, Wash., June 8.—Louis W. Hill, who recently resigned as president of the Great Northern Railway, said today he had received a telegram from his father, James J. Hill, stating that his father had resigned in his favor as chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern.

ARTIST PEIXOTTO IS CRITICALLY ILL

OAKLAND, Cal., June 8.—Ernest Clifford Peixotto, the American painter and illustrator, is critically ill here of tropical fever, contracted this Spring on an extended trip through Central and South America.

MISS PARSONS OF MELROSE, IN PRINCESS RACE

By THE PRINCESS EDITOR.

Attention, Princess Contest candidates! Don't forget the importance of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN and the news it will contain for all candidates in the AMERICAN'S fascinating Princess contest and their friends.

Remember that tomorrow is the big day for news. The big feature for candidates will be the lists showing the standings of the contestants. It will show just who's who in the contest. There will also be another big feature in another page of pictures of candidates.

The race is growing warmer. Just four weeks today and the election will be over. Three hundred New England girls will have been made happy by their friends.

And well might they be happy! The prize offered by the AMERICAN are enough to delight any true-blooded daughter of New England.

In addition to the first prize, the "Princess" outfit, the delightful ocean voyages, treat on the schedule, will furnish marvelous vacation trips for the winners and solve their vacation problems for them.

Prizes for All!

Prizes for all! No reason for anyone to be disappointed.

A little effort NOW will bring you great reward in four short weeks.

Line up your friends, girls! Don't stop there, either, but get every relative you own, every acquaintance you can remember, to do their share toward your election.

They'll do it—if you will but ask them.

Modesty is a mighty fine thing, but false modesty is a mighty poor thing.

Don't be bashful about the matter, girls—it's a business proposition.

Your friends are only too anxious to help you if you ask them.

You want their help!

Well, what's the answer?

Why, ask them, of course, early and often.

You'll be surprised at the vote they will pile up for you.

There is plenty of time! Four weeks more! It is NOT "too late" to start.

The right time to begin work is NOW and ALL THE TIME, for four more weeks.

It's just like saving money. The more you save, the more it earns for you.

Profit by the lesson to be learned from tomorrow's list of vote standing.

Another Page of Photographs.

See how a little effort has changed the standings since last Sunday.

Decide NOW that YOUR name will head the first printed list on Sunday, June 16th.

Another page of candidates' photographs tomorrow!

If your picture has not been published, look for it in tomorrow's page of pictures.

A last caution:

Get every one of the big five-vote coupons tomorrow that you can possibly scrape together. They count big!

Tomorrow's the big day!

One of the latest contestants is Miss Hazel Parsons, of No. 19 Gibbons street, Melrose. Miss Parsons has a host of friends who rejoiced when they learned during her life to reserve two small children from a sick bed during a fire in Maitapan three years ago. Miss Parsons is now cashier and assistant bookkeeper for the Continental Clothing Company at Washington and Boylston streets.

CLARK'S SISTER ON WOMAN'S COMMITTEE

CHICAGO, June 8.—Mrs. Annie Hamilton Pfost, the first woman in the United States to be elected as a delegate to a national political convention, has passed through Chicago on her way to the Baltimore convention. She is a sister of Speaker Champ Clark.

SLAY AMERICAN IN HONDURAS

News has been received here of the assassination in Honduras of Frederick Pierrepont Shaw, a New York lawyer, who lived at No. 140 Claremont avenue. Shaw formerly lived in Lowell. He was paymaster of the Lowell Machine Shop and organizer of the Shaw Machine Company. His father, Dr. Thomas P. Shaw, lives in Lowell now.

The dispatch with the news was given out first by the State Department at Washington and gave no details except that the assassin had been captured. It did not give his name.

The reason for the death of Mr. Shaw is surrounded by mystery and can only be conjectured from the few facts that are known about his errand to Honduras.

Mr. Shaw went to Honduras about two months ago with George A. Malachy, also of New York. They represented the Chicago Title & Trust Company, receiver of the Central American Commercial Company and their mission was to take possession of certain plantation property owned by the latter company.

They were acting under orders of the Federal Court of the Northern District of Illinois, and as such were really Federal officers.

Crown Prince in Bad With Kaiser Again

KIEL, June 8.—Lively, but bizarre gossip in naval circles, in connection with the coming yacht races, tells an interesting story to the effect that the Kaiser has again made his parental and military authority felt by the Crown Prince by ordering his son to remain with his regiment at Danzig in order to prevent him from coming to Kiel for the races.

The Crown Prince recently ordered a boat built which gossip in naval circles stated was to be entered in a race against his father's boat with himself in command. The Crown Prince probably thought it would be a good joke to defeat his father, but the Kaiser did not see it that way, for when he learned of his son's action he was much displeased.

While the Crown Prince's boat will probably be entered, it is said the Kaiser has refused to allow it to compete in the same race with his yacht. It is also said that the Kaiser has ordered that his son's application for leave of absence from his regiment to attend the races be denied as a punishment.

LAY CORNERSTONE OF HARVARD'S NEW GERMANIC MUSEUM

The cornerstone of the new Germanic Museum at Harvard was laid with impressive ceremonies. The principal addresses were by Count von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, and Adolphus Busch, of St. Louis, who presented most of the $250,000 for the building fund, and President Lowell of the University. The exercises consisted of the setting in place of the cornerstone and short addresses.

The new building is to occupy the space on Kirkland street, Cambridge, between Prentiss place and Divinity avenue, across the street from Randall Hall. The museum proper will consist of two wings of unequal length, the longer one facing Divinity avenue, the shorter one reaching the vertical gable between the two wings will be made an ornamental court with shrubs, stationary basins, and enclosed by cloister-like arcades running along the sides. The most striking feature of the external design will be a massive tower at the joining of the two wings which will dominate the whole structure.

MORSE IS RAPIDLY REGAINING HEALTH

BATH, Me., June 8.—A large number of Bath women have accepted the invitations to an afternoon tea at the Morse home, Washington street today. The cards bear the names of Miss Jennie R. Morse and Mrs. Charles H. Morse. This will be the first social at this home for a long time. Mr. Morse, since arriving here Monday, has looked well and taken a good rest. He is looking finely and says that he seems to be gaining in health every day.

Oh, You Charlestown People!

THE EASTERN STEAMSHIP CORPORATION is pleased to announce that its Metropolitan Steamship Line direct, All-the-Way-by-Water Service between Boston and New York will be inaugurated for the Summer season of 1912 on Monday, June 10th.

SCHEDULE (Beginning Monday, June 10th): Leave Boston Week Days and Sundays from India Wharf, at 5 P. M. Running time between the Cities about 15 hours. THE MASSACHUSETTS AND BUNKER HILL are notable examples of marine architecture; they are equipped with Wireless Telegraphy, Submarine Signal Service, and all facilities to insure the Security and Comfort of passengers. During the past Winter Nearly Half a Million Dollars has been invested in providing additional equipment for and general improvement of these vessels. These changes provide for the burning of Oil as Fuel; the addition of many attractive staterooms; the installation of Electric Fans in Inside Rooms; an outside Dining-room on the Main Deck; a Herricene Deck Cafe, etc.

AN UNBROKEN NIGHT'S REST direct from city to city on Luxurious Steamships over the most fascinating Sea Water Route in the world.

TICKETS AND STATEROOMS at India Wharf; also at various Tourist Offices on Washington Street, Boston.

The Ideal routes are those provided by the All-the-Way-by-Water Service of the EASTERN STEAMSHIP CORPORATION

Champ Clark the Strongest Candidate

The campaign of Champ Clark for the Presidential nomination of the Democratic party is in all respects the most remarkable and significant since, in 1892, Grover Cleveland went duck hunting in Louisiana and permitted the people to nominate and elect him.

Mr. Clark's candidacy was, saving Mr. Underwood's, the last to be organized on the Democratic side. Every other candidate was in the field, equipped, organized and making speeches and distributing literature, before Champ Clark had chosen Fred T. DuBois as his campaign manager.

John W. Clifton and a newspaper man in Washington up to that time had been the only sponsors and advocates of the Missourian's Democratic fitness for the highest office in the land.

Ably as Senator DuBois has devoted himself to his friend, it is safe to say, and it will be vindicated by any pre-election statement that may be made, that there has been less money and less literature behind Champ Clark than any candidate in the field on either side.

And from first to last the Democratic Speaker has not made a single speech in a single State in furtherance of his ambition, but has modestly and resolutely held to his allotted post of representative duty and left his campaign to the people and the record.

Our news columns have told the remarkable and spontaneous response which the people of this country have made to a real man and to a genuine Democrat, as proved by a loyal life and an open record.

From the very first vote in Oklahoma down to the registered result in West Virginia Champ Clark has not failed to win over all opponents in every definite primary before the people, except in Oregon, where he started too late, and in Wisconsin, where the vote was exceedingly light.

This record, of an astonishing natural popularity among the people, is now nearly complete.

According to Manager DuBois' latest estimate Clark now has 410 bona-fide instructed delegates.

He has pledged to him from the States of Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Tennessee, Virginia, Utah, Maine and Louisiana ninety-eight other votes, making a total of 508. There are 166 preference votes which are unknown, with Clark having the best chance to secure a majority of that vote.

Clark will control at Baltimore the States of Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

In addition to these TWENTY-SIX STATES, he will have four of the five Territories, insuring a positive control of the committees of the convention.

So that under this estimate the Clark forces will be able to make the rules, control the organization, write the platform and determine the course of convention from the start.

The States which Champ Clark controls have 241 electoral votes.

It is difficult to understand how any honest Democrat hunting victory in November can read this remarkable record and fail to see that of all the great Democrats now under national consideration CHAMP CLARK IS EASILY THE STRONGEST BEFORE THE PEOPLE, AND THEREFORE THE MOST ELIGIBLE NOMINEE FOR THE CONVENTION.

Science to Lengthen Our Days

If the people of the United States were properly instructed in the science of self-preservation, the length of life of the average person might be prolonged fourteen years, according to statistics prepared in urging the establishment of the new United States Health Service. That is to say, out of our 91,000,000 population 630,000 who die annually might have their lives prolonged.

The money loss due to this state of affairs amounts to about two thousand million of dollars yearly and nearly as large a sum entailed on the land owing to the loss of the productive power of 3,000,000 who are annually on the sick list.

We have made great strides in preventing disease. If we had not we could hardly have successfully tackled the Panama Canal or cleared Havana of yellow fever.

It is asserted that of the annual $160,000,000 pension roll three-quarters is paid out as the result of disease which might have been prevented. In the Spanish war there were about 20,000 cases of ty- with a loss of nearly 1,500, all of whom could have been saved.

In Havana, sixteen years ago, 639 persons out of every 100,000 died of yellow fever. In 1902, after the discovery of the real cause of the disease, there were no deaths from the scourge.

Science is making it easier every day for us to increase our years, but nature requires of us a careful attention to her laws. With the advantage of a sound body added to knowledge gained by scientific and medical discoveries, we ought to blossom into a nation of centenarians in a few generations.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

A BIG NAVY AND A FAST-FOOTED MERCANTILE MARINE.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Having been a student for years back of what is known in Europe as the Eastern Question, and having had opportunity a few years ago, in 1905, in the course of a visit to Japan, China and the Philippines, to acquire the best inside information obtainable on the Oriental situation, I consider any hesitation or delay upon the part of our Congress in providing for the building of two battleships a year not only unbusinesslike and foolish, but absolutely criminal.

There never has been a situation in the world's history in which the adage that "the way to preserve peace is to prepare for war" was so forcefully true as is that of the United States today.

I am glad that Admiral Dewey insists that in order to maintain the prestige to which this nation is entitled we should build four instead of two battleships a year, and every loyal, practical, patriotic citizen of the country must agree with him.

While attending to the battleships, every experienced citizen must see that steps should be taken to provide the fast colliers and transports without which the finest and fleetest battleships may be built only to become the prey of an enemy. Let us promote practically a fast-footed American mercantile marine, just as England, France, Germany, Japan and other wise peoples are carefully promoting theirs.

PATRICK ROAN.

The boy who drove the butcher wagon in the small town and later became a big man in a big town fixed Yum up right in his office.

Yum was given a little desk, some new clothes and a regular job. He kept at it rather faithfully for a month or so; then became acquainted with lads who took in the dances of an evening and had card parties. Yum was right at home with the cards. That was his dish. The trouble was that his job interfered with his pleasure, and he had an awful time keeping awake at his desk. Every afternoon now Yum dropped off to sleep, while the work on his desk piled up.

The boss became suspicious, gave Yum a call and let him go ahead again, but Yum couldn't play cards well and hold the job at the same time.

He was helped in every possible way by his employer, yet Yum had to have his little fling at pleasure. Finally, unable to run his business with a weak link such as Yum was, the boss was obliged to let him go.

Yum's mind was on games, and back to the old corner saloon he strolled.—By TAD.

Sleep and Life

How Much Sleep Ought One to Have? Oversleeping as Bad as Overeating.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

THE eight-hour work-day is undoubtdly based upon a traditional division of the twenty-four hours which the earth takes to make a single rotation on its axis into three equal periods, of eight hours apiece, each to be devoted to a different general purpose.

"Eight hours for work, eight hours for recreation and eight hours for sleep"—thus runs the immemorial adage. It is likely that this off-hand division of time rests upon some widespread experience of the needs and capacities of life and of the humn machine, for all old-time rules of this kind are always found to be grounded somewhere upon actual experience.

The question of the proper division of time, especially between the states of waking and sleeping, is one of great importance to every human being. Is it true, as it is generally assumed, that the average man or woman needs eight hours of sleep in order to keep body and mind refreshed and vigorous? It may very well be doubted, and it has recently been called in question by physicians whose opinions on the subject are entitled to attention. The proposition has also been made, with apparent reason, that too much sleeping is as bad as too much eating.

If it is true that we must have not less than eight hours of sleep, then man can do better than nature does, for he makes many of his machines work almost continuously, with the aid of proper care and sufficient lubrication. Is sleep the only efficient restorer of the powers of the body and brain? It is generally regarded as such, but the rule is frequently violated with impunity. It is well known that Napoleon—and a more energetic person than he probably never lived—took habitually only four hours of sleep out of every twenty-four. It is said that Frederick the Great had the same habit, and it has been averred that Thomas A. Edison requires only four and a half hours of sleep. Other famous men who have done an overshare of the world's work have been similarly chary of spending their time in a state of unconsciouness. It might be thought that in the case of Edison the anomaly could be explained on the ground that his work is almost purely mental. But Napoleon and Frederick were as active physically as they were intellectually. The former tired out his secretaries one after another, and could outride and outmarch his aides and his marshals.

There appears to be no doubt that great mental energy plays an important part in the ability to dispense with the ordinary amount of sleep. And it may be that in such cases the brain wears out the body. Napoleon died at fifty-two, and showed signs of failing powers several years before his death. Some have thought that it was failure of the physical powers of the great captain that lost Waterloo. On the other hand, Frederick lived to the age of seventy-four, but during the last twenty-three years of his life he had no campaigns to make.

The secret of making a few hours of sleep suffice no doubt lies in the ability, or habit, of sleeping profoundly. Restless sleep is often of little or no value. The habit of dreaming frequently breaks up sleep. The brain goes on working, though without the guidance of will or judgment, while the rest of the body slumbers, and the activity of the brain reacts upon the remainder and breaks the sleep.

This is not bettered by the fact that dreams in themselves are of brief duration. If they are recurrent they arouse and disturb the body many times in the course of a night. The brevity of dreams is astonishing, sometimes almost incredible. A sleeper may be awakened by the slamming of a door, and in the indefinitely short interval between the arrival of the sound waves in his ear and the actual awaking he may have such a dream as this—which is an actual experience: He thinks himself in the upper part of a barn at the side of a highway. Away up the dusty road, in the far distance, he sees a pig running toward the barn. He watches it with amusement as it kicks up the dust. Suddenly, as it approaches, it begins ominously to grow to gigantic dimensions. It is no longer an ordinary pig but a monstrous nondescript with a head as big as an elephant's and a body a rod long. With gleaming tusks and blazing eyes it rushes upon the barn, rears itself on its hind legs, level with the terrified dreamer, who pushes the door to, and trembingly fastens it. But the awful beast bangs the door open, and at the sight of its opened jaws in his very face the dreamer starts awake with a cry of terror and with drops of sweat running down his cheeks.

It is evident that the whole dream was born of the impression made by the slamming door, and yet, observe the marvellous violence done to time in the succession of the imaginary events of the dream. With lightning quickness the mind ran back, the instant the sound impressed the hearing, and constructed an orderly succession of events, which seemed to the sleeper to occupy in their gradual development a long space of time before the particular event closely associated with the noise of the door was reached. At the start there is nothing alarming about the dream. It begins with the amusing incident of the distant pig kicking up the dust of the road. Without any apparent reason the transformed pig becomes a threatening monster and then rushes at the spectator, who seems at first to be at a safe elevation above the road. The beast raises itself on its long legs and attacks the closed door—and not until then does something happen which can be directly connected with the sound that caused at the same time the awaking and the dream. One would say that the mind of the dreamer, through a sort of logical habit, refused to be thoroughly awakened until it had constructed a complete story to account for the awaking. And then consider the wonderful independence of real time that was shown by the operation of the mind. To the sleeper there appeared to be no hurry; to him there seemed to be an actual long lapse of time—but to the person who slammed the door the awaking of the dreamer was evidently instantaneous, and absolutely coincident with the cry of terror that accompanied it.

Many similar instances are recorded, and indeed the rule appears to be universal that a dream caused by a disturbing sound or touch, no matter how long its events may seem to the sleeper to be dragged out occurs in a moment.

The philosophy of sleep and of dreams has not received all the attention that it merits,

A Popular Boston Woman the Direct Descendant of a Line of Kings

THE most interesting discovery has just been made that a gifted and popular woman in Boston society is of royal blood. She is the direct descendant of a line of kings. This fact, just brought to light, has been proved conclusively. Who this woman is, her picture and all the facts associated with her royal origin will be found in the pages of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Every man who is on the student roll of Harvard University will possess himself EARLY of a copy of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. He buys one every Sunday. But tomorrow he will be up with the lark to make sure he does not get left and be obliged to borrow a Sunday AMERICAN from Tom, Dick or Harry, and perhaps wait all day before he gets it. Why?

Because in next Sunday's paper every Harvard man will want to read the story which shall tell him about the smallest, the tallest, the brightest, the clubbiest, the handsomest, the most popular men and the biggest "Fusser" of the senior class.

The AMERICAN'S big auto wagons will carry a mountain heap of Sunday AMERICANS to Cambridge on Sunday morning. But that mountain will be cut down pretty low before the wagons reach Harvard square. Warning—Be forehanded. Bespeak your copy today at your newsdealers.

Young Mr. Dana, the grandson of Longfellow, and his bride-elect, Miss Halliday, have drawn up a set of rules for each other's guidance. These rules show the course of marital action for the ideal wife and the ideal husband. Those who follow those rules will escape the breakers. Every man and woman of marriageable age will read the code with interest.

Every Bostonian of brains and of civic pride should take live interest in the Cape Cod Canal. In its own way it will mean more to New England than even the titanic ditch down at Panama. The members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce are looking over the canal today. AMERICAN artists and writers will be with the party. Look for the illustrated story of the trip in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

What is the future of our race to be?

None but Divine Omnipotence can answer that. But within human limitations there is a full and interesting forecast in an editorial which deals in detail with the future progress of humanity. Artists, musicians, doctors of medicine and of law, writers, the class fond of manual work—healthiest of all—the class devoted to intellectual speculation and research, all will read this editorial and find food for thought.

Turning over the pages of the editorial and magazine sections of Sunday's AMERICAN, one will find feature after feature of fun and humor, of pathos, of art and science, and of touching romance such as could not be surpassed in the pages of a high-priced magazine.

Foremost of them all is a powerful half-page article of supreme power and interest. Its title is "How Girls' Loves Are Wrecked." It is a warning story. Many a bright young life of promise will be saved from shipwreck by its perusal.

Such will be, in part, tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, the cost of whose production runs into the thousands.

But there is more. Politics is sizzling and singing close to the boiling point all over this nation. Such a contest this land of ours has never seen since the first notes of the Liberty Bell rang out to the listening people.

The story of the Battle of the Giants will be told down to the latest hour in the Sunday AMERICAN, also shall be told the news of the churches, the homes, the clubs and societies, the theatres and the great array of sports and athletics in which New England's millions take such vital interest.

In a word, the news of Boston, of Massachusetts, of New England, of the Republic, of all the Americas and all the world besides may be found in the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow.
